BACK BAY WOMAN FALLS 6 STORIES TO DEATH

Today

Our Busy President
Futile Yardstick
Brain and Soil
Poor Mr. Trotzky

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE PRESIDENT in this prohibition day? Rum runners, in a high-powered boat, attack a Government border patrol boat, and win, in a running fight.

While that happens, Senator Glass of Virginia is accusing President Hoover of "submerging prohibition," not giving it the proper attention. And to make matters worse, the President, on Wednesday, had to shake hands with 1176 proud Americans.

It is a pity that an able Engineer-President, elected to do things, should be compelled to waste his time in such a fashion.

Our Mr. Dawes and Britain's Mr. Ramsay MacDonald have decided that "statesmen," not naval technical experts, must arrange the armament agreement.

Where will Uncle Sam find his "statesmen?" Britain raises them. We give offices to accidental politicians and call them statesmen.

They decided also that you cannot create any "yardstick" to establish comparative fighting value of ships of different sizes, gun power, speed, etc.

That's solemn truth. Let one side have the yardstick and let the other have a fighter like Nelson or Blake and your yardstick will look foolish.

Yale University is $500,000 a year richer than last year. The new money comes from gifts of ten millions made to Yale during the last 12 months.

This nation, with its annual income of NINETY THOUSAND MILLIONS of dollars, treats education generously. But the value of education depends not on money, but on the brains on which the education money is spent. A crop depends not entirely on the seed, but more on the soil.

Nearly 900 years ago, when Abelard taught logic and theology to young men in the University of Paris, they gathered in winter time in a stone-lined room, not heated, taking notes by candle light.

And many, too poor to pay for candles, climbed the church steeple on bright moonlight nights, to continue their studies there by moonlight.

A few such students might be worth more to the world than a thousand million dollars of endowment. Edison gave to the world more money than wealth has ever given to education. So did Pasteur. Neither ever went to college.

Poor, harassed Leon Trotzky will now apply for permission to enter the United States, having been turned away by Germany and Great Britain.

The former associate of Lenin, once head of the Soviet army, knows little about this country if he hopes to be admitted.

The founder of Christianity Himself, if He came here under another name, preaching as he preached on the shores of Galilee, would be deported just as soon as the order could be issued.

John Andrus, 89 years old, calls off this year's reunion of his Wesleyan College class of 1862. No other graduate of that year is left alive, and he must celebrate alone.

Some day, hundreds of millions of years hence, but SOME DAY, the last man alive will stand on the earth all alone.

That last must come, for the sun must die by loss of heat, and the earth must die with it.

The last man will cling to life, probably still wondering what happens after death, prolonging existence, artificially, without the sun's heat, for a while. Then the last man will die, the earth will roll, dark and cold, to be broken up and made over billions of years from now.

Uncle Sam continues prosperous. On June 8 he collected $239,602,300 in income tax, the biggest return for any single day. Your prosperous Uncle Sam now has a surplus of $101,795,855.

Before the war this country thought Congress extravagant to spend a billion dollars in two years. The debt of New York city was bigger than the whole national debt, before the big war.

Wars are expensive, especially when they take you by surprise and you have to hire $1-a-year patriots to spend your billions hurriedly, without getting anything for them.

READING IN DRAMATIC DEFENSE

Arguing in his own defense in Supreme court disbarment proceedings against him, Arthur K. Reading, former attorney-general, said today he would give his right arm if he could change the situation resulting from his use of the name of Atty. Herbert L. Barrett.

He said that the idea of having a $25,000 check made out to Barrett originated with Joseph D. Webster, and as far as the letter was concerned there was no deceit, as the Decimo Club knew it was intended for Reading.

The former attorney-general added there was not a scintilla of evidence that the Decimo Club was given protection in Massachusetts, was looking for protection or had need of protection. Likewise he said there was no evidence that the $25,000 fee could be construed as a bribe or graft.

"I could have corrected the check that day," he said. "I could have taken other means to collect the

BEAT 2 GUARDS IN N. H. STRIKE

Newmarket, N. H., June 21 (AP)—Deputy Sheriff John Ryan was in the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, today with serious injuries suffered last night in the first outbreak of violence since the start of a strike of 800 employes of the Newmarket Manufacturing Company 17 weeks ago. Deputy Sheriff Lewis Hersom was also injured.

According to police, a group of about 20 strikers ambushed the two officers, who were off duty, and after severely beating them dispersed. Ryan sustained a fractured jaw and several broken ribs. Hersom suffered severe body and facial bruises.

MANY FLEE E. BOSTON BLASTS

Explosion of a huge still rocked a section of East Boston today and caused damage estimated at $10,000, partially wrecking an eight-car garage and destroying one automobile.

The still was in one of the stalls of the garage situated in the rear of houses on Maverick st.

The blast blew out the side of the wall and started a fire, and when firemen broke in the door to get at the flames, the fire spread to the adjoining stall, where it ignited the gas tank of an automobile, causing a second explosion.

Residents of the neighborhood were greatly alarmed and many fled, fearing further blasts.

The garage is owned by Anthony Ventri of Saratoga st., according to the police, but he said that he did not know that the occupant of the stall had a still. He gave the authorities the tenant's name and search for him began.

The auto that was destroyed when its gas tank exploded was owned by Ventri's son, Christy.

Summer Arrives Officially Today

Having given the Hub a few advance samples of its wares, summer arrives officially at 5:01 p m. There has been much talk during recent heat waves of "an early summer," and as a matter of fact the season will be the longest of the four seasons this year, lasting 93 days 14 hours 52 minutes, while spring was here only 92 days 19 hours 26 minutes.

Prize Temperance Plan Is Urged on Congress

Washington, June 21—Solution of the raging prohibition enforcement problem along lines recommended by Justice Frankline Chase Hoyt of New York in his $25,000 prize winning plan submitted in the temperance contest conducted by the Hearst newspapers, has just been urged by Representative John C. Schafer (R.) of Wisconsin, in the Congressional Record.

Schafer, who inserted the Judge Hoyt plan in the Congressional Record yesterday, declared in an extension of remarks that the contest conducted by the Hearst newspapers brought out ideas which would bring true temperance and restore respect for law and order. He said:

"William Randolph Hearst is to be commended for his patriotic purpose in launching the contest for a plan to cure existing evils.

"The prize-winning plan, if enacted into law, in my judgment,

YALE BEATS HARVARD TWICE

New London, Ct., June 21 (AP)—For the sixth time in seven successive years Yale today swept the two preliminary races in the annual regatta with Harvard on the Thames river.

The Blue freshmen in a spectacular closing spurt came from behind to beat the Crimson yearlings by a scant three-quarters of a length in a two-mile race that was thrilling all the way.

Immediately afterward, Yale's junior varsity eight, in workmanlike fashion, rowed to a decisive and unexciting victory by four lengths over the Harvard "Jayvees."

YALE STOCK GOES UP

With this twin triumph to her credit, Yale's stock remained high in anticipation of making it a clean sweep by winning the varsity four-mile race, scheduled this evening at 7 p. m. Odds on the Elis for the Fall Is Fatal

MRS QUINCY TUCKER IS VICTIM

Mrs. Quincy Tucker, 51, wife of a wealthy State st. business man and yachtsman, was killed today when she fell from a window of her sixth floor suite in a Back Bay hotel.

The woman was alone in the suite when she took her fatal plunge.

Workmen paving Bay State rd. were startled when a window screen crashed in an alley a few feet in from the street. Then the woman hurtled down to the concrete.

She was picked up and placed in a passing automobile.

The driver went first to Back Bay police station, then finding the ambulance out, continued to City Hospital, where the woman was pronounced dead.

Mr. and Mrs. Tucker, according to the hotel management, had lived in the hotel, occupying the same sixth floor suite, ever since the place was opened two and a half years ago.

The hotel management and employes knew nothing of the death plunge, they said, until notified by people from the street.

Brief Service for Gen. Booth

London, June 21 (AP)—While a line of quiet and reverent men and women stood outside, high officers of the Salvation Army today conducted a brief service over the body of Gen. William Bramwel Booth, their former commander, lying in state in Congress Hall, Clapton. Gen. Edward J. Higgins, who succeeded Gen. Booth as head of the Salvation Army, conducted the service.

25 BROWN STUDENTS EXPELLED FOR RIOTING

Providence, June 21—Twenty-five students were dropped from the rolls of Brown University today as a result of the rioting of May 29 in which undergraduates, chiefly members of the freshman class, clashed with citizens and police. In addition, the entire class of 1932 is forbidden indefinitely to hold social functions, denied absence privileges and must pay all just claims for riot damages.

SOUTH END COAL YARD AND WHARF THREATENED BY $50000 FIRE

ren & Bradford Co., the flames swept the entire district between Canton and Plympton sts.

Thirty horses, the property of the City Fuel Co. and Whipple and Co., Inc., were led out into the streets and stampeded, causing danger to early spectators.

Edward Galvin, a fireman attached to Engine 22, was struck by a falling timber while fighting the flames, and was taken to city hospital, where he was treated for lacerations of the scalp.

Residences were endangered when flying embers ignited several roofs nearby.

Property owned and leased by the City Fuel Co., and Whipple and Co., Inc., was the most seriously damaged.

The fire started on the end of the wharf, nearest the South Bay Channel, in a coal unloading tower, swept through a coal run to coal pockets in the front of Albany st., where the City Fuel Co. had stored about 600 tons of coal.

Engine Company 3, the nearest to the fire scene was not notified by alarm, but observed the flames, and answered the call.

On either side of the burning area were wooden business buildings that were highly inflammable.

FIRE BOATS IN ACTION

Two fire boats attacked the flames from the South Bay Channel side.

The flames licked at the big piles that held up the wharf which were fought from the water by the fire department "pup boat."

The door leading from the Whipple Co., Inc., stables to the street, where 25 of the horses were boarded, had to be battered down to get them into the street.

Sergt. Dennis Driscoll, with the squad from the East Dedham st. station, was early on the scene, and used the butts of their riot guns to break down the gates to allow the horses out.

"Black Beauty," the only horse owned by the City Fuel Co., eight times a blue ribbon winner and kept in retirement by that company for sentimental reasons since their distribution has become motorized, was brought to the street by Alexander Rogers, foreman of the plant.

GIRL AND 4 MEN HURT IN CRASH

Five persons were injured today when a taxicab and another automobile collided in Western ave., Lynn, near Fox Hill bridge.

The driver of the second automobile was arrested on charges of driving while under the influence of liquor, drunkenness and driving after his license was revoked, and two other occupants were arrested for alleged drunkenness.

The injured, all of whom were taken to Lynn Hospital, are:

Miss Evelyn Dobbins, Cottage st., Lynn, multiple cuts and abdominal injuries.

Joseph Derosier, Elmwood st., Revere, multiple cuts and bruises.

Stephen Borucky, Chestnut st., Chelsea, cuts on head.

Anthony Borucky, his brother, of the same address, lacerations on head, body and limbs.

Stephen Borucky was the driver of the privately owned automobile, according to police, who said the taxicab was sideswiped, causing it to tip over. He was arrested at the hospital and held in $800 for hearing in Lynn on June 28.

His brother and John Rzpiela of Division st., Chelsea, another occupant, who escaped injury, were charged with being drunk. They were held in $300 each. All pleaded not guilty.

The injured girl and Derosier were passengers in the taxicab which was operated, according to the police, by DeOria.

Reading's Final Plea

fee. I realize now I should have corrected it."

Referring to the letter written on Barrett's stationery, Reading said it was of a highly controversial nature, and there was every reason to believe it would be reproduced and sent to each section of the country where the Decimo had a subsidiary.

If it had gone through on Reading's stationery, he said, it would counteract the demand he had had made that his position should not be capitalized.

FOUR WITNESSES MISTAKEN

The witness said Arthur Benninck, assistant cashier of the Old Colony Trust Co., was mistaken as to the date he talked with Reading about the transfer of $300,000 from New York to his bank.

A newspaperman he said, was in error in publishing a story on May 21, 1927, that the attorney general had just returned that day from New York.

Joseph D. Webster was wrong or mistaken on the date May 23 which he included in a telegram to Reading, he stated.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Salvaggi of New York was wrong in his testimony relative to the first conference he had with Reading, according to the witness.

He gave up the plan to call character witnesses and also to testify in re-direct in order that the hearing might be speeded up and all the evidence be in the hands of Judge Sanderson before nightfall.

The former attorney-general succeeded in having stricken from the record the testimony of Joseph Stewart, who testified a week ago for the prosecution.

Reading, in his motion, said that Stewart was assistant to Hugh B. Monjar, head of the Decimo Club, his right-hand man, and a picked member, and it was not credible to believe he would say anything to injure Monjar.

Attorney Frederick W. Mansfield, president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, who is conducting the prosecution, offered no objection to the testimony being stricken out.

In opening his final argument, Reading took up first what he claimed was the right of the attorney-general to engage in private practice while in office. He defended his acts and cited cases where the attorney-general had acted as private counsel.

$10,000 IN RUM, 2 MEN SEIZED

Lowell, June 21—Ten thousand dollars' worth of liquor, said by the police to be imported Scotch, rye and rum, was seized today in a garage on Durand st., and two men arrested at the points of revolvers.

An attractive young woman, who arrived at the rendezvous with a man shortly before the raid was not held.

In court, Thomas Dunn and Michael Scorch, giving Niagara, N. Y., as their home, were found guilty of illegally keeping liquor and were fined $200 each.

Police say the men told them they were transporting the liquor from the Maine coast to Niagara Falls, which one officer remarked seemed like carrying coals to Newcastle.

SPANISH FLIER HOPS FOR U. S.

Cartagena, Spain, June 21 (AP)—Maj. Ramon Franco, celebrated Spanish aviator who flew across the South Atlantic in 1926, took off here today at 4:50 p. m. (10:30 a. m. E. S. T.) for the Azores Islands on the first lap of a flight to New York.

Condems "Showy" Church Weddings

Chicago, June 21 (INS)—"We would not have so many divorces today nor would we have a court of domestic relations if couples were made to realize the solemnity of the marriage tie," Dr. Walter A. Maier of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, told the Evangelical Lutheran Missouri Synod today. Dr. Maier criticized "showy" church weddings and hurried trips to a justice of the peace.

Paris Is Mad Over Maniacs' Art Show

Paris, June 21 (INS)—Pictures painted by the insane are the new rage in Paris. At an art exhibition now showing here, the canvases are all the work of patients in asylums for mental disorders.

When the exhibit closes and the canvases delivered to their purchasers, virtually all the best drawing rooms in Paris will have at least one water color by a dipsomaniac, or one decorative panel by a Schezophrenic.

The collection is naturally extremely varied. It includes, for instance, only one pink elephant, an animal of very imaginative anatomy, however, who has already been sold.

A landscape in shrieking green and purple, a woman's head on a serpent-long neck, huge yellow nudes outlined in vivid red, weird Edgar Allen Poe-ish scenes of skeletons dangling from high gallows and of figures perilously clinging to cliffs, are among the sights which greet visitors to the exposition.

ASK HUNT ON RUM BOATS

Windsor, Ont., June 21 (AP)—Search of liquor boats by Canadian officials for firearms is advocated by Crown Atty. James S. Allan as a means of combatting liquor smuggling.

Allan advanced his suggestion in opposing release on bail of Alfred J. Woods, wealthy Amherstburg dock owner, arrested on a charge of receiving a camera stolen by rumrunners from a newspaper photographer they kidnaped Tuesday.

Allan said liquor runners are permitted to land unmolested and unquestioned, while other persons entering the country by ferry are closely scrutinized.

He added that a stricter enforcement by the United States river patrols has weeded out the weaker rumrunners and that the gangs now at work are undoubtedly the toughest of rumrunners, "fellows who'll not be frightened by talk, and I think it was men of this character who were responsible for Tuesday's affair at Amherstburg."

Charges "Higher Ups" Are Back of Rum Smuggling

International Falls, Minn., June 21 (AP)—Charges that the smuggling of Canadian whiskey into the United States across the border in the vicinity of International Falls was being carried on by "higher ups" were made today by David Hurlburt, Koochiching County attorney.

His remarks were contained in a statement which followed President Hoover's appeal to International Falls residents and border community citizens for "full co-operation" in enforcing the dry laws of the United States. The message was the outgrowth of the killing June 8 of Henry Virkula, Big Falls confectioner, by a customs border patrolman, Emmett J. White of Duluth.

Married Women Seek to Hold Citizenship

Berlin, June 21 (AP)—Independent citizenship for married women, a subject in which the United States was recognized to have the most progressive legislation of any country, was urged in a resolution adopted by the Congress of the Women's International Suffrage Alliance. Increas of legal age for marriage in all countries to 16 years for girls and 18 years for boys was recommended in the same resolution.

New York, June 21 (AP)—There's a big demand for American talkies in the schools of Japan, where English is a compulsory study.

STATE PAY INCREASES $400,000

Salary increases for state employes aggregating in excess of $400,000, one of the biggest in the history of the state, have been approved by the governor and council effective June 1.

The increases the graded within the minimum and maximum limits set up in the established classification list in steps of $60, $120, $180, $240 and $300.

Where the employe is below the maximum and know nto be exceptionally efficient and satisfactory in all respects, double-step increases have been authorized. Eliminantion of some recommendations for double increases, however, was disclosed today when the payroll came around for signatures.

A story was put in circulation that the failure of all double increases recommended to go through was because of a deficiency caused by the item of $111,000, which the Legislature put in for salary increases for itself.

This story was spiked quickly by Charles P. Howard, chairman of the Commission on Administration and Finance. He pointed out that practically all employe increases were provided for in the budget of last March. The money for the legislator's increase, he said, comes out of the revenue from inheritance taxes, the returns from which are in excess of first estimates. He also explained that the double raises recommended in many instances were unjustified upon investigation and were eliminated, in some instances, by department heads themselves.

3 BOYS FROM STATE SCHOOL CAPTURED

Fatigued and hungry, three youths, found resting upon a curbstone in Massachusetts ave., Cambridge, today admitted to police that they were fugitives from the Walter E. Fernal State School at Waverley.

The boys, Wilbur Williams, 17; Gerald Whorton, 18, and Louis Pitchman, 18, escaped from the school yesterday because, they told the police, cruelties were inflicted upon them by the authorities. They slept last night in an empty Lowell house and made their way to Cambridge today.

Police provided them with food and notified the state authorities of their apprehension.

URGES ACTION BY CONGRESS ON HOYT PLAN

will solve the problem and again inculcate in the hearts of the American people respect and obedience to law and order and such a measure can be passed by Congress without fear of being construed as unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

URGES STUDY OF PLAN

"I believe a great majority of the American citizens favor this plan of modification as against the existing prohibition laws.

"President Hoover's crime-investigating commission is searching for a remedy for the present breakdown in law enforcement as the result of the unworkable prohibition laws.

"This commission should certainly give Justice Hoyt's plan its most careful consideration. The issue has gone beyond the question of prohibition. We are now faced with the problem of law enforcement and how to obtain respect for law. Justice Hoyt's plan points the way out.

"I appreciate the courtesy extended by the House in granting my request for an extension of remarks on the prohibition question and the inclusion of the $25,000 prize-winning plan submitted by Hon. Franklin Chase Hoyt in the nation-wide contest sponsored by that sterling American, Mr. William Randolph Hearst.

"The operation of the existing prohibition laws has convinced Mr Hearst that a liberalized modification of these laws must be effected if the best interests of our Republic are to be maintained.

FEAR FOR LIVES

"Each day's tragic news brings to the attention of the American people the failure of the existing prohibition laws.

"The excessive, wanton toll of human lives taken by federal officers charged with enforcing prohibition laws, culminating in the assassination of Henry Virkula near International Falls, Minn., has even caused the citizens of the Republic to be fearful that their lives may be snuffed out any time they traverse the highways.

"Prohibition has failed in the field and has reached the stage of guerilla warfare.

"Under the existing system, the federal killers are tried in federal courts and defended by federal officials, notwithstanding the fact that the people desire a trial by the local courts."

Carewe and Bride on Second Honeymoon

CO-ED'S SLAYER SORRY, WANTS QUICK DEATH

Columbus, O., June 21 (INS)—"I'm sorry I killed her. I didn't plan to do it. The argument came up suddenly as we were riding in my coupe.

"She threatened to kill my wife and baby. I lost my head and hit her with the hammer."

Sitting calmly in his cell in the county jail today as the authorities rushed preparations to have him indicted for first degree murder, Dr. James H. Snook, 49, deposed Ohio State University professor, told reporters why he killed his paramour, Theora K. Hix, 25, co-ed medical student.

He feels the disgrace he has brought upon his wife and daughter keenly, he said, and declared he will "plead guilty and have it over with quickly."

$10,000 BAIL IN BIG MIX THEFT

Portsmouth, N. H., June 21 (AP)—Russell Everett, 22, negro porter, of Peru, Ind., was held in $10,000 bail for the grand jury today on charges of grand larceny.

Everett was arrested after police said he confessed to stealing a bag containing $75,000 in cash and securities from a private car of Tom Mix, motion picture actor and circus performer.

The bag, with $4000 of its contents missing, was found hidden under one of the circus cars. The police charged Everett mailed all except $200 of the missing $4000 to Peru, Ind.

Everett remained silent when he was arraigned in police court before Judge Ernest L. Guptill today and would make no plea. In default of bail he was committed to Rockingham County jail.

Missionary Escapes From China Bandits

Amoy, Fukien, China, June 21 (AP)—Dr. G. H. Holleman, Reformed Presbyterian Church missionary in Southern Fukien, who recently was abducted from his post by Communists, has arrived safely at Swatow and is expected at Amoy, June 22. He escaped from the Communist bandits after being held several days.

Bishop Walsh of Newark to See Pope

South Orange, N. J., June 21 (INS)—The Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Walsh, bishop of the diocese of Newark, will sail July 6 for Rome, to join in the celebration of Pope Pius' golden jubilee as an ordained priest. He will be accompanied by Monsignor Barrett of Buffalo, N. Y.

M.-G.-M. IN BIG MOVIE COMBINE

Los Angeles, June 21—One of the most important deals consummated within recent months in the motion picture industry was announced with the signing of contracts continuing the affiliation of the William Randolph Hearst motion picture interests with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

By the terms of the new contract Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will continue to produce and release the pictures starring Marion Davies, whose past performances have made her one of the great favorites of the film-going public.

Cosmopolitan productions also will be produced and released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as in the past four years.

Commenting upon the consummation of the negotiations, Mr. Hearst said:

"The continuance of our association with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is most gratifying to me. The amazing achievement of this organization in both production and distribution have placed it foremost among motion picture enterprises."

The first alliance between Mr. Hearst's motion picture interests and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was effected more than four years ago.

During the life of that contract there were produced for Cosmopolitan several outstanding pictures, such as "White Shadows in the South Seas" and "Our Dancing Daughters."

PICTURES SUCCESSFUL

Miss Davies added several other productions to her already long list of brilliant performances with "The Fair Co-ed," "Quality Street," "Show People," "Beverly of Graustark," "The Red Mill," "Her Cardboard Lover" and "Tillie the Toiler."

At present she is working upon her first talking picture, "Marianne."

Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, said of the alliance:

"It is with particular pride that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announces the signing of contracts which give our organization the exclusive affiliation with William Randolph Hearst motion picture interests for a long period of time.

"Under the new arrangement, M-G-M will continue to present the productions of Miss Marion Davies, whose brilliant success has contributed so largely to the success of our company.

PLAN BIG FILMS

"Plans will be prepared immediately for the presentation of Miss Davies in productions that will outshine anything ever attempted before in the way of starring vehicles for this talented actress, whose artistry has placed her in the very front ranks of the screen's most popular favorites. Miss Davies will appear in two and possibly three outstanding productions a year.

"Cosmopolitan productions will also continue to be produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"International Newsreel is to be discontinued as a separate unit upon the termination of present contracts. It will be combined with M-G-M News after the first of August and will be known as M. G. M. International News. This news service will be in silent form and will be produced by the great Hearst organization.

"News pictures in sound, also produced by the Hearst organization in all parts of the world, will be released starting the middle of September under the name of Hearst-Metrotone News."

100 KILLED IN HOSPITAL BLAST

London, June 21—One hundred persons were killed and many injured when a terrific explosion rocked the East-Bund Hospital at Canton, completely destroying the main building, in which 400 patients were housed, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch received from Hong Kong today.

Fire followed the explosion, adding to the havoc.

Thirty of the victims were bedridden patients in the hospital. The others were hospital workers, visitors and rescue workers.

Red Cross workers, police and soldiers from the various military posts in Canton effected many rescues

The cause of the explosion has not yet been ascertained. The fire which followed spread rapidly and the main building was a mass of debris in a very short time.

It is not yet known whether there were any Americans or Europeans among the casualties

SHEEHAN GOES BACK TO DUTY ON STREETS

Exonerated of charges of drunken and reckless auto driving, but held guilty of infractions of police department discipline, Patrolman Jeremiah E. Sheehan, member of the headquarters liquor squad, goes back to pounding pavements today, on the night shift.

By order of Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson, Sheehan is taken off plain clothes duty and returned to routine work as a patrolman on the Mattapan division. He must report for roll-call at 5.45 p. m., accepting assignment to the first half of the night shift.

Police heads today refused to comment on the situation, except to say that "the matter is closed."

Although Sheehan's transfer from dry sleuthing to walking a suburban beat amounts to a severe disrating, Commissioner Wilson's ruling in his case proved more lenient than that of a trial board of police captains.

The board found the accused officer guilty of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, guilty of inducing a police officer to release him after he had been placed under arrest, and guilty of driving an automobile so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public.

Sheehan's dishonorable dismissal from the police force was recommended by the trial board's report.

Commissioner Wilson, however, reversed the board's finding on the three major charges.

Five Men, Woman Held After Crash

Westerly, R. I., June 21—Following a collision in which their New York registered automobile figured, four Chinese, a Mexican and a white woman were arrested here. They are being held pending a probe of the citizenship of the Chinese.

The party included Ricardo Florez of New York city, driver of the machine; Sue Murphy of Astoria, L. I., and John Sama of Brooklyn, according to the names entered on the police blotter. Names of the other Chinamen could not be obtained by police. None of them could explain who the three Chinamen were and where they came from.

Plans School for Eskimo Children

Wiscasset, Me., June 21—Little Eskimo feet which have never had the privilege of "creeping slow to school," will soon know what it means, for stored away in the hold of the staunch little Bowdoin when she sails from this port tomorrow with Comdr. Donald B. Macmillan and his party for exploration of northern Labrador and Baffinland, will be the materials for the construction of a first class community house and school building.

Seven Harvard seniors who received degrees this week are the recipients of scholarships for travel or study abroad during the coming year. The highest traveling award open to a senior, the Henry Russell Shaw traveling fellowship, was awarded to Raymond F. Courtney of Tulsa, Okla., who graduated summa cum laude in philosophy, and ranked as one of the two leading scholars in the graduating class.

The highest award for study in residence abroad was awarded to Alan R. Sweezy of Englewood, N. J.,

Watertown Field Day Set for July 13

The annual field day of St. Patrick's Church, Watertown, will be held at Saltonstall Park on Saturday, July 13.

POLICE WILL HOLD HIM AS WITNESS

Apprehension of the driver of the machine which transported from Manchester-by-the-Sea to Boston Dwight Underwood, 24, Tech student, shortly before he drank the cyanide and vermouth "cocktail" which caused his death, was expected today.

Sergt. Walter French of the Back Bay police is said to know the identity of the driver of the car and expects to take him into custody.

In the meantime North Shore society was awaiting startling disclosures in the poison mystery, as a result of new evidence obtained by the police regarding the Manchester champagne party from which young Underwood went home to die.

After 12 hours of intensive investigation at Manchester, Sergt. French is prepared to divulge, if necessary, facts indicating that young Underwood acted as a waiter at a dinner at which wine flowed freely.

FEARS POLITICS WILL SPLIT METHODISTS

Richmond, Va., June 21 (AP)—Bishop Collins Denny, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South has declared himself emphatically opposed to the mingling of the church and of churchmen in politics.

He gave his views on this subject in a conference of the Richmond district of the Methodist church in opposition to a resolution being sent to President Hoover voicing support of the conference to the President's activities and pronouncements on law observance and enforcement.

While agreeing with the spirit of the resolution, the bishop said he felt it was not proper for the conference, as a unit of the church, to take such action.

"I feel very deeply about this," Bishop Denny said. "I do not think it is within the sphere of the church to do such things. I fear it means the ultimate division of the Methodist church, for many will refuse to be dragged, as a church, into politics.

"Where do we get, as a church in church capacity, the authority to pronounce judgment on actions of civil officials?

"If we claim the right to approve, we can claim the right to judge. It is a question of propriety altogether."

Sweetheart Blamed by Bandit From R. I.

Detroit, June 21—Leo Valley, 21, of Woonsocket, R. I., who claimed he became a bandit when he was jilted by his sweetheart, was sentenced to from 10 to 15 years in the Michigan State Prison at Jackson today by Judge Charles Bowles.

Valley was convicted last week for the holdup of Stephen Ayers. Police said he has confessed to and has been identified with 16 taxicab holdups. Valley told Judge Bowles he had been in Detroit two months, coming here from Woonsocket. He said he had a good job there, but when his sweetheart returned his engagement ring he became discouraged and wanted to "go to the dogs."

Ex-Express Worker Dies in Keene Home

Keene, N. H., June 21—Frazier Clive Eaton, 64, formerly an employe of a railway express company in Springfield, Mass., and a member of a lodge of Odd Fellows in Springfield, died suddenly at his home here. Burial will be in Sunderland, Mass. On June 15 he married Mrs. Etta Covey, who survives.

Gertrude Hayes Laffey, wife of wealthy Malden resident, but former queen of the burlesque, whose suit for divorce is on trial in Middlesex Probate Court.

LAWYER MUST SERVE 2 YEARS IN ATLANTA

Samuel L. White, Beacon st. attorney, was sentenced to two years at Atlanta penitentiary today while his wfie's screams and sobs rang through the federal court.

Judge James A. Lowell denied an appeal for leniency made by White's counsel, and declared the convicted Lawyer had shown no repentance for his crime, but asked mercy only after exhausting every legal means to escape punishment.

White was convicted last August of conspiracy to conceal assets in the bankruptcy of J. Cushing Co. of Malden. He carried his exceptions through the United States Court of Appeals to the United States Supreme Court, which found against him two weeks ago.

Judge Allows Will of Mrs. Susan Casey

Dedham, June 21—Judge Joseph R. McCoole, in the probate court, allowed the will of the late Mrs. Susan P. Casey of Weymouth, and appointed Russell S. Riley administrator, with will annexed. The estate is valued at $12,000 in real property and $1000 personal.

Mrs. Casey left the entire estate to her husband at the time of her death, but he died before the instrument was offered for probate. Five nephews and nieces then petitioned the court for jury issues but Judge McCoole disallowed the petition.

Says Hubby Ran Off With Wife of Artist

New Haven, Ct., June 21—Judge Arthur F. Ells in Superior Court took under advisement the plea of Mrs. Gertrude Hall Bassett of Madison, for divorce from Richard Ellsworth Bassett of Los Angeles, who took a prominent part in the Rhode Island divorce of Nina Wilcox Putnam, noted authoress.

Mrs. Bassett charges her husband with eloping with Mrs. Muriel Blanchard Nelson, heiress wife of William A. Nelson, Madison artist. Mrs. Bassett said Mrs. Nelson took Bassett away in her roadster just after the Putnam divorce.

TWO RELEASED IN URQUHART DEATH QUIZ

Two of the three suspects questioned in connection with the slaying of Fred M. Urquhart in front of his Marcella st. (Roxbury) home were released by Roxbury crossing police today.

The third youth will be questioned further, according to Capt. Jeremiah Gallivan, but "probably will be released."

Capt. Gallivan declared that, in his opinion, the anonymous "tip" that brought about detention of the trio was sent by someone nursing a grudge against them.

The precinct chief admitted the investigation was up against a blank wall and that no clue, even of a motive for the killing, had been discovered.

Today the police set about endeavoring to check Urquhart's movements on the night he met his death.

HAYES-LAFFEY LOVE SUIT IS ON TRIAL

The divorce suit of Mrs. Gertrude Laffey, formerly Gertrude Hayes, Jr., burlesque queen, was given a hearing today in Middlesex Probate Court.

The former actress, now mother of two children, charges her wealthy husband, Joseph H. Laffey of Malden, with failure to provide for herself and the children.

Mrs. Laffey has won the first skirmish in the case. Several weeks ago she obtained temporary custody of her children, Gertrude, four, and Bruce, three, and Laffey was ordered to pay $10 a week pending the divorce hearing.

The Laffeys were married on July 22, 1927 after a rapid fire courtship. When news of the marriage reached Detroit, David Nussbaum, actor and musician, rushed here from that city with a claim that the former Mrs. Hayes had been engaged to marry him.

Nusbaum filed a $50,000 alienation of affections suit against Laffey, but the newlywed Mrs. Laffey retaliated by filing a criminal charge against the actor.

This charge was tried before a jury, which disagreed.

Couple Remarry on 40th Anniversary

Hampton, June 21—On their 40th wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Roberts were "remarried" in their home here by Rev. C. P. Hanson of Baptist Village, East Longmeadow.

Roberts wore the same coat in which he was married in Ionia, N. J. to the then Georgie Harwal of Ionia. They have three children and three grandchildren and are members of several fraternal organizations.

Worcester School Swimming Program

Worcester, June 21—Worcester Polytechnic Institute swimming team schedule for next season has been announced by Prof. Percy R. Carpenter, head of the physical education department, as follows:

Jan. 10, Union here; Jan. 18, Williams here; Feb. 8, Amherst at Amherst; Feb. 15, Brown at Providence; Feb. 22, Bowdoin at Brunswick; March 8, Springfield here; March 14 and 15, New England championships.

Origin of Mystery Gas Wave Unknown

El Paso, Texas, June 21—Poison gas that swept over a residential district near two oil refineries and a natural gas plant here last night, taking the lives of two sleeping children and overcoming more than a score of other persons, has been definitely established as hydrogen sulphide. While the nature of the death-dealing gas was determined, its origin remained a mystery.

Elected to Yale Corporation

New Haven, June 21—The election of John V. Farwell, president of the John V. Farwell Co., Chicago, and head of the National League that assisted in the formulation of the Federal Reserve act, to the Yale University corporation was announced here. He is a graduate of Yale of the class of '79.

AVON GIRL AND BROCKTON BOY 'ELOPE'

Avon, June 21—The Avon High school graduation party was transformed into a wedding reception after one of the girl graduates slipped away from the festivities and returned an hour later as a bride.

Mrs. Washburn

Only half an hour after she received her diploma Phyllis W. Beals, 18, of West Main st., became the wife of Roger H. Washburn, 19, of Fuller st., Brockton.

With her diploma in her hand she quietly left her classmates, met Washburn and motored with him to the residence of the Rev. E. H. Gipson, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Brockton, with whom arrangements had been made for the marriage.

Some of her chums who had learned of the filing of marriage intentions last week, trailed the couple in autos but had to wait outside the minister's house while the ceremony was taking place.

The bride, accompanied by her husband, then went to Enterprise Hall, scene of the graduation reception, and when Principal Charles J. Keelon of the high school learned of her marriage, he announced it and the party was hers from then on.

The young couple plan a trip to Maine for a honeymoon. They had made no secret of plans to wed soon, but gave no hint that the wedding would take place so soon after her graduation.

Plunges 2100 Feet Off Mountain Top

Canon City, Col., June 21 (AP)—Plunging from Eagle Point, near here, a man named Polo, said to have been from New York city, fell 2100 feet to his death in the Royal Gorge. Polo, employed by a carnival playing here, climbed Eagle Point with a group of friends. From the point it is possible to look straight down for nearly a half mile, to the hanging bridge across the Arkansas river.

Women Must Fly Like Man to Hold Records

By MARGEURITE YOUNG

Associated Press Staff Writer.

Washington, June 21 (AP)—The first woman has yet to earn a living by practical flying, and in exhibition aviation of all kinds no woman holds a world's record.

But because, for one reason, flying is something which must be learned, according to a rigidly set formula—"a man's way"—Jesse Lankford, chief of the licensing section, aviation branch of the Commerce Department, believes that a better day is dawning for women in aviation.

He said today that although seven women have obtained transport pilot's licenses—compared with 4500 masculine pilots of this class—and although a total of 65 women have been licensed to fly, not one has ever engaged in commercial flying for a living.

The National Aeronautic Association has established a separate file for women's records. Not one of these equals men's achievements in the same phase of aviation. Loise McPhetridge, for instance, holds the women's altitude record—20,270 feet—but this compares with the 39,140 feet altitude mark of Lieut. Apollo Soucek of the navy.

"They haven't had a chance," Lankford said. "They haven't stood an equal chance with men to earn the necessary money to learn to fly—nor to fly after they know how. Once they learn, they learn in a man's way, and they are just as good pilots."

STATE G. O. P. TO STAGE BIG OUTING

Noted speakers are to be on the program for a joint outing of all Republican organizations in Massachusetts, to be held in Worcester on Saturday, July 20, in celebration of the 75th anniversary of the birth of the party in this state. Preliminary plans were started today under the direction of Amos L. Taylor, chairman of the Republican state committee.

The idea of the outing originated with Charles Nichols of Chelmsford, executive secretary of the committee, and has already been approved by the executive board.

The local Worcester Republican organization, as representing the city where the Republican party of Massachusetts was born, is to have an important part in the plans for the event, and all Republican committees and clubs are to be invited to participate.

The celebration is to be the largest of its kind ever attempted by Massachusetts Republicans, and noted guests and speakers are to be invited from outside of the Commonwealth. It has been suggested that former President Calvin Coolidge of Northampton may be induced to make this an occasion for his first public appearance since he laid aside the duties of his office on March 4 last.

Lose $30,000 Suits Against Railway

Northampton, June 21—Suits of Joseph, Anna and Robert Michaelman and Louise Perschy, all of New Britain, Conn., against the Northampton Street Railway Co. for damages totaling $30,000, tried in Hampshire Superior Court, resulted in a directed verdict for the defendant here.

Action was brought as the result of a collision between an automobile and a trolley car on South st., October, 1926, in which the plaintiffs were injured. Evidence was introduced to show no negligence on the part of the street railway company was a factor in the collision.

"LAWS AND WOMEN often make scoundrels of men when they are not," observes ED. HOWE in the Boston Sunday Advertiser next Sunday—and he makes other pertinent observations as well.

THREE hundred and six years ago—less than three years after the landing of the Pilgrims—the first permanent settlement in New Hampshire was established at Dover, N. H.

When folk nowadays want to tell the world of any part of it about those days and the other rich chapters of Dover's history, they call forward City Clerk Fred E. Quimby to do the honors.

Seventy years young, this public servant has seen nearly a quarter of the community's long span of history, and interesting facts fairly pour from his lips as he speaks from memory.

But even Quimby cannot tell you why the city's name is Dover, for no musty parchment explains it and none of the early settlers came from Dover, England. First it was Wecannecohunt, as the Indians called it, while the settlers referred to it as Hilton Point, meaning especially the point where the Boston & Maine Railroad bridge now links Dover to Newington.

"Wecohamet it was sometimes called, this being the English abbreviation of the Indian name," explained Mr. Quimby. "Sometime along in the first decade the Hilton settlement acquired the name Pascataquack, variously spelled. Later it was Bristol, then Northam, and finally Dover, when it became united with the Massachusetts Bay Colony."

EVERYBODY in Dover knows Fred Quimby. He is in his 35th year as city clerk, but he is more than a public official, he is an institution, a perennial leader in civic affairs and fraternal circles. At odd moments, when at home, he can be found at his hobby, woodworking, shaping one article or another with tools which he prizes highly.

While one figure stands pre-eminent as the local historian, many a resident can tell of Dover's present place in the sun, and they speak glowingly of business conditions. None quite so exuberantly, however, as James F. Dennis, Chamber of Commerce secretary.

The genial face of "Jim" Dennis has been missed from gatherings of his fellow townsmen for 13 weeks past, but out at the pleasantly situated Wentworth Hospital, laid low by blood poisoning, he smiles up from his sickbed and tersely lays bare the pulsing heart of the industrial community.

"Dover, which has been a city since 1855, is a trading center for no fewer than 75,000 persons and has a population itself of 14,109," he said. "It is our happy lot to have extremely well diversified industries.

"The principal industries are manufacture of cotton and woolen fabrics, leather belting and leather goods, printing presses, machinery, shoes, bakery products, doors and kindred products.

"Our schools and public buildings are commodious and attractive, our fire department has no superior in New England in a community of this size, our tax rate is among the lowest in the Granite State. There are one daily and two weekly newspapers.

THE Wentworth Hospital, over which Miss Grace P. Haskell presided since its foundation in 1906, was given to the city by Arioch Wentworth, who was the founder of Wentworth Institute in Boston.

Residents passing of Central ave., the main artery of the city, are heard bemoaning the torn-up condition of the street, but in their next breaths they are commenting on the advantage of the new permanent cement roadway that soon will be a reality.

This much-discussed public improvement is under the general supervision of Ernest L. Lucas who was chosen for the office of street commissioner last November by the largest popular vote ever received by any candidate for any office in this city. Commissioner Lucas is one of those who says work is both his business and his hobby but he admits a penchant for bridge whist in spare moments.

DOVER, proud of its fire department, boasts of a chief only 34 years old. He is Carroll L. Nash, who was in the chemical warfare service in the World War, is a prominent member of the American Legion and the New England International Fire Chiefs Associations, and dotes on boxing when he can find time to attend bouts.

Another war veteran is City Marshal Charles C. Crowley, friend of the Boston superintendent, Michael H. Crowley, but not a relation.

Among the prominent businessmen of the city is Harry P. Henderson, president of the Merchants National bank, a trustee of the Merchants Savings Bank, of which Owen Coogan is president; insurance agent and real esate dealer, treasurer of the Rotary Club and president of the Dover Red Cross chapter. He is a member of the Cochecho Country Club and enjoys a round on the links.

The biggest bank is the Strafford National, of which Frank R. Bliss is cashier, besides being county treasurer and a member of the school board.

Dover is an important railroad junction and for that reason it is fitting that the baggage master is one of the best known residents, for he is none other than Charles E. T. Caswell, thrice mayor of Dover, retiring last December.

FIRST LIST FOR LINDY HATS TOMORROW

Tomorrow, children of the Lindbergh Club, the first list of 100 boys and girls of the club who will be given the new Lindy Aviation cloth hat free, will be published in the Boston Evening American.

Be sure to look through the long list of names. If yours is there, just write the secretary of the Boston American-Lindbergh Club, P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass., and send your full name and address. Your hat will be mailed to you FREE as soon as your letter is received.

The Lindy aviation hat is something new. It was designed by a hat manufacturer especially for the Boston American-Lindbergh Club. It is designed just like a real aviation helmet but is made of cloth for summer wear. The Lindy hats come in assorted color combinations of red, white and blue. It is a hat that every boy and girl will be proud to own.

Boys and girls of the Lindbergh Club living outside of Boston will not be forgotten in this treat. Names from all over New England will be included in the lists which will appear daily starting tomorrow.

Beginning next Monday 50 names of boys and girls will be published in the Boston Evening American daily until the supply of hats is exhausted. Watch the Boston Evening American for YOUR name.

New Bank Building

Theophilus King, president since 1886 and director since 1877, of the Granite Trust Company of Quincy, with the officers of the bank will be host tomorrow when its new 10-story building will be opened to the public.

Hair of Painters Turns Gray in Fall

The hair of two Lynn painters turned gray when they fell 30 feet with the collapse of a staging at Barrett ct. in Lynn. The hair transformation was not caused by fright but by the splashing on their heads of two cans of gray paint that toppled on them in their sudden descent.

They are Fred Wood of 4 Ravenater, and James Mernuzzi of 223 Lynnfield st., and despite their long fall both escaped injury.

Worcester Men Held in Fall River Theft

Fall River, June 21- James Carney, 25, and Raymond P. Leduc, 19, both of Worcester, were held in $5000 bail each for the grand jury in the district court on charges of robbery. They were identified by Fred Mahan, a storekeeper, as the men who held him up June 10 at the point of a revolver and stole his watch and $25 besides taking $12.50 from a cash register in the store. Both pleaded not guilty.

Secretary Adams Eats Beans Like Gob

Washington, June 21—Secretary of the Navy Adams eats his beans at the navy cafeteria in the navy department like a real gob. Just about the noon hour the secretary, a native of Boston, may be seen waiting his turn in the cafeteria line. Navy beans, which he contends in reality are Boston beans, are his favorite dish. Once a week the cafeteria offers codfish cakes on the menu. Secretary Adams on that day gets a "fish ball" with his beans.

Bishop Sees Politics in Swindle Expose

Washington, June 21—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., issued a statement denouncing as an intrusion upon his private affairs and as the work of "enemies," publication in the press of the disclosure that he had been a customer of Kable & Co., New York stock brokerage house, recently indicted on charge of using the mails to defraud.

The bishop, the most prominent dry crusader of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, leader of the anti-Smith forces, especially in Virginia, and chairman of the Anti-Saloon League's legislative committee here, incorporated in his retort copies of telegrams he exchanged just before the last election with Sen. Glass of Virginia, with whom he is still waging a political struggle for dominance of the Democratic party in the Old Dominion.

The senator's query as to whether the bishop had been indulging in "stock gambling" elicited the reply then which the bishop makes now that political and other enemies are seeking to undermine his influence.

JAPAN IS READY TO JOIN PARLEY FOR NAVY CUT

Washington, June 21—Japan is ready to co-operate in the movement undertaken by the United States and Great Britain for naval reduction, according to the pledge made by Baron Tanaka, the Japanese premier, in conversations with Edwin L. Neville, the American charge d'affaires at Tokio.

The State Department was notified in a message from Neville that the prime minister had informed him that Japan was prepared to support any measures for further reduction of armaments and that Japan wanted peace and lessened expenditure for war purposes.

Beyond this brief announcement the State Department gave no details of the conference between the two officials, but the word of the stand of Japan, although confidently counted on, was received with satisfaction.

Meanwhile as speculation increased as to what the next move would be in the negotiations initiated by Gen. Charles G. Dawes, the American ambassador at London, and Ramsay MacDonald, the British prime minister, Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador, called on Senator Borah, chairman of the Senate foreign relations, who has long been an advocate of armament limitation and of an understanding between the British and American governments on freedom of the seas.

GANG IS JAILED FOR CRIMES

New Bedford, June 21—Judge Dillon in Superior Court imposed sentence on John M. Raymundo, Alvaro Sylvia, William P. McManus, Anthony J. Simmons and August Dutra, principals in a series of crimes in New Bedford, Fairhaven, Acushnet and Fall River.

Raymundo was sentenced to five years in the Massachusetts Reformatory on each of three indictments, a total of 15 years.

Simmons was sentenced to three to four years in state prison on each of four indictments, a total of 12 to 16 years.

Dutra, who was chauffeur for the outfit, was put on probation for two years.

McManus received the stiffest sentence of all, seven to eight years in state prison on each of three indictments, a total of 21 to 24 years. The three indictments against him were all based on a hotel holdup.

Sylvia was sentenced to six to seven years in state prison on each of three indictments, a total of 18 to 21 years.

The swift disposal of the cases of the five gangsters was made possible by pleas of guilty on all counts by each of the men.

Sylvia and McManus retracted former pleas of not guilty and pleaded guilty. The others had already pleaded guilty.

Civic League Paid $1000 for Lobbying

The Massachusetts Civic League paid $500 each to Cornelius A. Parker and Winona Pinkham for services on legislative matters in which the league was interested during the recent session, according to returns filed with the Secretary of State under the lobby act.

The Allied Theaters of Massachusetts, Inc., paid $2500 for the services of J. Albert Brackett as legal representative at legislative hearings.

The firm of Warren, Garfield, Whiteside & Lamson, received $200 from the Worcester Consolidated Street Railway and a similar amount from the Springfield Street Railway Company.

Mrs. Gann's Social Status Now Fixed

Washington, June 21—Sir Esme Howard, dean of the diplomatic corps, entertained at dinner last night in honor of Vice-President Curtis and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, the Vice-President's official hostess.

This was the final step in the social vindication of Mrs. Gann's right to official recognition as her distinguished brother's hostess. There were 40 guests, with Mrs. Gann in the position of honor on the host's right, while Vice-President Curtis was at Lady Isabella's right.

400 Are Out for 8 Jobs on Farm Board

Washington, June 21—President Hoover spent the first day of the Congressional recess putting in full time at his office considering a variety of subjects brought to him by more than a dozen callers and by Administration officials.

Information at the White House was that the total number of names suggested for the eight places on the Farm Board exceeded 400. The first process will be to select the most outstanding and then begin the elimination from among these.

Farmer's Ruse Is Fatal for Fox

Webster, June 21—Baited by a live hen tethered on a stretch of binding twine, a wily old 10-pound dog fox suspected of causing the recent decimation of Felix Martin's flock of Wyandottes, fell a victim of his appetite for chicken when Farmer Martin, using him as a target, scored a bullseye with a heavy charge of BB shot from cover in his hen house.

3 Canadians Killed in Crash of Plane

Montreal, Que., June 21—Capt. I. C. Jervis, M. C., 32, elder son of Lord T. Vincent and former aide de camp to the Governor General of Canada, and two companions were killed today in a crash of their seaplane into the St. Lawrence river between Point St. Charles and Nuns Island.

Radio Board Renews Permits for Press

Washington, June 21—The Radio Commission decided to reissue to Joseph Pierson, trustee of the American publishers committee, construction permits for 20 communication channels reserved for the press.

Filene's
Built on values, growing on value

Why dresses in our $10.75 dress section are DIFFERENT!

We never think of $10.75 dresses as "cheap" dresses! Instead, a separate department with a special buyer to scout values at this one price. Our Bureau of Standards, which tests French Shop dresses for fit, tests $10.75 dresses also. Our stylists are as "fussy" about their good taste. Why, even the Resort Shop, which selects merchandise all through Filene's for smartness regardless of price, finds plenty of "good bets" in our $10.75 dresses. No wonder you should see them—they ARE INDEED different!

Some irresistible sleeveless frocks with jackets have breezed in this week-end for misses.
$10.75

White with a gay blue, red or green jacket, like the sketch, makes an excellent outfit for tennis and "afterward." Another breezy style is of crisp polka dots. Still a third among the new arrivals is of a self-jacquarded dot in pastels. If you can wear size 14 to 20, you may have any of these in our misses' section. (Otherwise the women's section, where there are similar styles, just as good values, sixth floor.)

Fourth floor. Other dresses, $5.95 to $135.

Filene's
Cold storage for FURS

Any coat worth keeping is worth storing NOW

If you are going to save your fur coat or your cloth coat until next winter, you must place some value on it.

If it's worth wearing again next winter, it's worth keeping safe from moths and other dangers during this summer and fall.

Cold storage charges are small (3% of valuation with reasonable minimums), and in addition to safety, you get blown-air cleaning and free inspection for necessary repairs.

That's why we suggest you bring your furs and winter coats to storage BEFORE you go on your holiday.

Filene's has the LARGEST privately owned fur storage vaults in New England.

Filene's has separate vaults for the storage of fur trimmed cloth coats.

Filene's was the first in Boston to give usual 24-hour delivery service in the Fall.

Filene's was first in Boston to deliver furs "while-you-wait" at the vaults.

Filene's was first to open a home-like Reception Room in connection with its storage vaults.

Call HANcock 3800, and let us come for your furs. Or leave your order at the Information Desk, street floor. Or bring them directly to the vaults in our Cambridge Building, on the Esplanade.

Filene fur workmen put the skill of new coat making into their repairing, relining, and remodelling. Consult our Paris-trained fitter.

New Home for Capt. Fried

Yonkers, N. Y., June 21 (AP)—Capt. George Fried of the Steamship America is to receive a surprise after his ship docks at Hoboken. A delegation of Yonkers citizens and Mrs. Fried are to meet him and bring him to a new home bought by Mrs. Fried without his knowledge.

HUB MAN WITH ROOSEVELT STRICKEN

Shanghai, June 21—Howard Coolidge of Boston and a Dr. Wheeler, member of the subsidiary party of the Roosevelt big-game expedition into Indo-China are seriously ill with dysentery, it was reported today by C. S. Cutting, a member of the expedition, arriving here from Saigon to sail for home.

The subsidiary party, Cutting said, has been operating 50 miles from the Roosevelt base. Following the death of Dr. Hendee of Brooklyn, zoologist, who leaped from a window while suffering from fever, Coolidge and Wheeler were stricken.

They are suffering severely, Cutting said, and are in a serious condition.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., who with his brother Kermit led the expedition, is expected at Saigon on July 1.

Cigarette Lighter Causes Baby's Death

Nice, June 21 (INS)—A cigarette lighter indirectly caused the death of Robette Hampton, 18 months-old daughter of a bank manager of Nice. The lighter was in the vest pocket of Eugene Reviglio, a chauffeur. It fell out while Reviglio was pouring gasoline from one drum to another, snapping open and igniting the fluid. Reviglio hurled the flaming drum through the door of the garage just as a nurse, pushing a baby carriage, passed by and the baby was mortally burned.

Students! 13 More Jobs Are Waiting

Thirteen more jobs are offered high school and college boys and girls today through the medium of the Boston Evening American's free employment service.

Ten young women between 20 and 25 years of age are wanted by William Leckie of room 315, 131 State st., Boston, to begin work next Monday demonstrating a new fruit flavor gelatine. These demonstrations will take place in stores. Persons desiring these jobs should apply directly to Mr. Leckie.

Don't apply to the Boston American office as applications are NOT received there.

Joe Russo, proprietor of a beauty salon?, at 110 Tremont st. requires the services of two girls between 18 and 22 years of age to learn permanent waving. Applications should be made between 5:30 and 6 p. m. daily to Mr. Russo or his manager, Miss Hilda Lee, at 110 Tremont st.

A boy of 16 or 17 years of age, who does not intend to return to school is wanted by the Acme Electric Heating Company of 1217 Washington st., Boston. He will be taught to assemble electrical parts. Apply to H. Price at the address mentioned.

Employers who require additional employes are invited to make their wants known to "Employment Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass." This service is entirely free.

Takes A. P. Post

New York, June 21 (AP)—F. W. Hartford, publisher of the Portsmouth, N. H., Herald, has accepted appointment by the executive committee of the Associated Press as a member of the auditing committee.

ENGLAND FACES NEW COAL WAR

London, June 21—Difficulties are threatening once again in the already anaemic coal mining industry of Great Britain. Observers declare the clouds are only small at the moment, but they are quickly gathering.

Nearly all the agreements in the various coal fields on which the scale of pay to the men is based end this year, and already it seems plain that the first important test the new labor government will have to face is the problem of miners' wages.

Other terms have to be negotiated, and it is believed to be impossible to avert a crisis such as reigned at the beginning of 1926 and precluded the only general strike in the history of Britain.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

TEXAN DEFENDS MRS. HOOVER

Dallas, Tex., June 21 (AP)—Republican State headquarters announced that R. B. Creager, Republican national committeeman, had telegraphed Governor Dan Moody a protest against signing the resolution of the Texas House and Senate criticising Mrs. Herbert Hoover for the De Priest social episode.

Mr. Creager spoke "as a native born Texan with the same feelings and opinions you have with reference to social equality of the races," said the telegram.

The message also recited that "during the last Democratic administration, 1913 to 1921, persons or negro blood on various occasions were invited to the White House and, on several occasions, ate at the White House table."

Every child who sends a letter on "The Value of Music" will receive a free ticket to this inspiring performance. Address the AIDA FESTIVAL EDITOR, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

100 More Boys to Attend C.M.T. Camps

An increase of 100 openings for New England students at the C. M. T. camps of this corps area was announced this week after 3200 places alloted to the area had been quickly filled.

EDITOR FLAYS WAR IN TALK TO STUDENTS

East Northfield, June 21—"Christians should never again as they did in the last war try to reconcile war with religion," Kirby Page, editor of the World Tomorrow, declared in an address at the Northfield conference on religion, for college men, here.

"Let your mind run back to the army camps," he said, "to the villages and homes from which the soldiers of each side came during the last war, and you will discover that on both sides Christians were praying to the same God for success in the slaughtering of the other side. You cannot reconcile that."

Referring to the evils of war, Page said, "The most terrible atrocity of the World War was not the destruction caused by submarines, poisonous gas, Zeppelins or tanks, it was the blockade whereby thousands of children were killed by the slow process of starvation, and thousands more who did not die were left maimed and crippled for life.

"When anyone talks to you glibly about defending virtue by war, of defending women and children," he continued, "try and get them to face realities. If you study you will find that there is nothing that damns the lives and bodies of women and children more than war."

Concluding his address, Page said, "My conviction is that if Christians would recognize the irreconciliability of the way of war and the way of Jesus, they would not abandon Jesus but would abandon war."

EXTENSION OF DEBT FAVORED

Washington, June 21—Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee, has expressed the belief that the President would probably feel justified in extending the date when the French war material debt of $400,000,000 is due from August 1 despite the failure of Congress to enact the resolution authorizing the extension.

Similar opinions have been made by Vice-President Curtis and Speaker Longworth, both of whom felt they had no authority to sign the bill because the House had adjourned prior to the passage of the resolution by the Senate.

All difficulty would be avoided by the ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt settlement by the French Parliament prior to August 1. Intimations that this action is anticipated have been credited to the State Department.

ACID THROWER GETS 18 MOS.

Springfield, June 21—In district court Raymond Karweski, 46, of Providence, R. I., was sentenced to 18 months in jail, when he was found guilty of the charge of throwing acid in the face of Mrs. Alice Chrzanowski of 94 Essex st. He appealed and was held in bonds of $4000 for appearance in superior court.

According to the police, the defendant became angered over the refusal of the woman to accompany him to Providence and he threw the contents of the bottle, which he testified contained moonshine whiskey, in her face. The authorities, however, found that the bottle contained an acid.

OLD McINTYRE has dug up some new ones! This time it is "Some Pet Hobbies of the Famous": Ray Long's favorite breakfast; how Paul Whiteman eats; what Fannie Hurst wears; Sinclair Lewis reciting. Mac tells all about them in the Boston Sunday Advertiser next Sunday.

Making of a Jesuit Told to Protestants

Interdenominational fellowship was exemplified in the Bulfinch pl. Unitarian chapel, when 50 workers in Protestant denominations from many sections of the United States heard an informal talk by Rev. M. J. Ahern, S. J., on the Society of Jesus and later praised him for his address.

Fr. Ahern spoke with the approval of Cardinal O'Connell describing "The Organization and Education of Jesuits," and by invitation of the Massachusetts and Greater Boston Federation of Churches, at a supper in the chapel vestry tendered the executive secretaries of the federations of churches throughout the country.

Rev. B. F. Lamb, president of the National Association of Executive Secretaries, presided. George H. Ingram of Trenton, N. J., offered resolutions that June 30 be designated "Loyalty Sunday" when ministers shall be requested to urge loyalty ideals and pray that mankind turn to righteousness.

Rev. Dr. George L. Paine, secretary of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches, introduced Father Ahern, who gave an historical sketch of the Society of Jesus since its founding nearly 400 years ago and an account of his own observation of its activities in this country during the 33 years he has belonged to it.

He also described the varied character of the education it maintains at comparatively little expense in 40 high schools and 32 colleges. About one-third of the membership of the order is engaged in teaching, he said, and purely religious education is given only two hours each week.

Likening the Catholic sodalities in some ways to the Christian Endeavor Society of the Protestant world, Father Ahern said many of the Holy Cross athletes belong to the sodality.

The total number of Jesuits in the world was given as 21,000, about 6000 of them scholastics, and 4000 lay brothers. An impressive record of achievements of Jesuits in various brancehs of science was read.

Asked from the floor if the oft-repeated statement that "The end justifies the means," is Jesuit doctrine, Father Ahern declared that no organization could have existed as long as the Jesuits with such a motto.

He characterized is as an absurd falsehood first circulated 30 or more years ago by one edition of the Encyclopedia Brittanica, also by an ex-member of the Jesuit order, who undertook in court to justify his contention by citations, but lost his case.

Father Ahern's closing wish that there may be unity between Christian workers of all denominations to extirpate unrighteousness was warmly endorsed by his hearers.

CHURCH UNITY ADVOCATED AT CONFERENCE

The church was called on to present a united front to the enemy, by the Rev. Dr. Malcolm James McLeod of New York City, in his address to delegates to the 13th council of the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance at First Presbyterian Church. His subject was "The Gospel of God."

He said that the church has been guilty of a most short-sighted policy in not banding together and that "when the church of God presents an unbroken front to every evil then the politician will listen to us."

He said that no business organization has been guilty of such "blind stupidity" as the church in not uniting and that any refusal to accept unity will leave a "bad taste." The gospel is everlasting, he said and what is needed is a gospel for yesterday, today and tomorrow and not for any particular period.

A strong plea to combat paganism was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Charles Merle D'Aubigne of Paris, president of the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance, at the business session yesterday. He said in part:

"Combat modern paganism by taking advantage, as does the Catholic Church, of every evidence of reaction against it and thus make of the evangelical faith the power of God, which it never should have ceased to be.

"Missionary work is progressing, but in civilized countries Christianity does not seem to have the same conquering force it used to have. No waves of spiritual power sweep our lands today. Our churches lack strong religious inspiration.

"We admire the activity of your churches in this country. We know that your church membership more than keeps pace with the increase in the population, but may I not candidly confess that we are sometimes exercised by the rather loose hold which religion seems to have on many American citizens.

"The every-day power of your religious faith seems sometimes to be restricted to such organizations as the Seventh Day Adventists, the Christian Scientists and the residents of Salt Lake City. There seems to be a lack of strong Christian inspiration in your common every-day life."

6 INJURED IN MALDEN CRASH

Six persons were injured when a motor car operated by Fred L. Spracklin of 43 Marlboro st., Chelsea, was in collision with a machine operated by Ormand F. Humphreys of 195 Webster st., Malden.

With Spracklin were Barney Mayers, 18, 709 Broadway, Chelsea; Abraham Woolfson, 14, 127 Grove st., Chelsea; Dennie Wilinsky, 14, 73 Central ave., Chelsea, and Florence Davis of 28 Shute st., Malden. All were slightly injured.

The latter sustained a possible fracture of the right leg and was treated at a nearby house. Mrs. Dorothy Humphreys, with Isaac Bayer of 81 White st., Malden, were in the car operated by the former's husband and both suffered minor injuries. The drivers were unhurt, but both machines were wrecked.

STATE PROBES LOAN SCHEME

The commission on the necessaries of life is investigating a money lending scheme through which at least one man has been charged exorbitant prices. The case as reported to the commission is one of a home owner in need of cash, who saw an advertisement in a newspaper to the effect that mortgage money could be secured at 6 per cent.

Answering the notice, the home owner was given reasonable terms but the lender insisted on a fee of $100 for examination of title. The customer demurred, saying that cooperative banks charged only $25 for examination of titles to property of much greater value. He finally paid $99 for the examination and then reported it to the commission.

FUND FOR KIN OF MANHOLE VICTIMS

Lowell, June 21—While State department health officials and local police are going on with their investigation of the causes of the manhole tragedy Tuesday, efforts to raise funds to aid the dependents of the five victims are meeting with generous response here. Contribution approximated $2300.

Dr. George H. Bigelow, commissioner of public health, in commenting on the disaster, said that his department is attempting to determine whether the cause of the tragedy still remains, so that, if this is the case, the cause may be removed before any further tragedy is enacted.

Plans for the inquest to be held in district court are being made by Lieut. Patrick J. Frawley, designated by Supt. Hugh Downey to perform the work.

He has already interview a number of witnesses, who will later be summoned to the inquest.

Medical Examiner Marshall L. Alling, after a test of the blood of the five victims, signed death certificates, in all instances designating the cause as "carbon monoxide poisoning."

Texas Youth Given 90 Years in Prison

Houston, Tex., June 21—Tony Gorona, 18, is anything but downhearted, and when he was sentenced to jail on several counts of robbery recently, he smiled.

"Only 105,921 days to go. That's easy," Tony said.

He had just been sentenced to 90 years in jail, but it didn't bother Tony much as he sat down to figure how many days he would have to spend in prison.

Doctor Guilty in Death of Woman

Auburn, Me., June 21—A superior court jury reported a verdict of guilty of manslaughter against Dr. Charles K. Donnell and Mrs. Estella Edwardss, both of Lewiston, in connection with the death of Mrs. Thelma E. Smith of Portland following an illegal operation. The jury was out five hours and 25 minutes.

The case went to the jury much sooner than had been expected.

Brattleboro Man Hangs on Hat Hook

Brattleboro, Vt., June 21—Albert A. Keyes, 79, was found hanging from a hat hook in Odd Fellows' Temple by George A. Reed, caretaker. Keyes, who lived at the home of Mrs. Beulah H. Jackman, had been ill for some time.

He apparently made two attempts of suicide as one coat hook was broken and lay on the floor. His neck was not broken. He died of strangulation.

Reprieve Saves Boy From Gallows

Hartford, Conn., June 21—Governor John H. Trumbull signed a reprieve for John (Spirits) Feltovic, 19, condemned to death for the holdup murder of Lester Jacobs, Bridgeport chain store manager, the night of March 23.

The reprieve was granted because of an appeal to the Supreme Court from a superior court jury's verdict. Feltovic was to be hanged the week of July 15.

MRS. LYDIG ILL WITH STRANGE MALADY

New York, June 21—Stricken by some mysterious malady, Mrs. Rita de Acosta Lydig, international society beauty, is at the Neurological Hospital of the new Medical Center at 168th st. and Broadway, it was learned today.

She was removed from her suite in the Ambassador Hotel, 51st st. and Park ave., in a private ambulance and had to be carried on a stretcher.

Both hospital and hotel authorities refused to disclose the nature of her illness.

Recently Mrs. Lydig filed a petition in bankruptcy, a move which is understood to have been no surprise to her friends.

The stricken woman, twice married, last figured prominently in the news when her engagement to Dr. Percy Stickney Grant was broken because of objections by his bishop.

Her first husband was W. E. Stokes and her second Lieut.-Col. Philip Mesier Lydig, who died last March making no mention of her in his will.

FEARS REVOLT AGAINST RUM LAW IN U. S.

New York, June 21—Open revolt by a large section of the American people against prohibition and its results, is inevitable unless the Hoover administration acts to remove the causes for such revolt. This is the view of Dr. James Truslow Adams, historian and political scientist, as expressed in an article in the July Forum.

Dr. Adams was the winner of the $2000 Pulitzer prize in 1922 for the best book on American history. He received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Yale in 1900.

The historian declares the fundamental problem now confronting the people is whether the United States is to remain a civilized nation or come to be ranked with Kipling's "Lesser Breeds Without the Law." He adds:

"It is evident that the present situation, which would disgrace a savage tribe, cannot continue along its indicated curve without leading directly to a breakdown of government, or to a dictatorship.

"To a considerable extent, indeed, the government has already broken down in one of its most essential duties—the protection of the persons and properties of its citizens; as is evidenced by private policemen, armed guards and armored cars. The citizens have had to undertake such protection for themselves."

WHAT REMEDY?

Hoover's formula "Obey every law on the statute book or get it repealed" will not do, Dr. Adams says.

"What remedy does he suggest beyond appointing the inevitable investigating committee which, according to the custom of such bodies, will probably sit for one to five years, publish a voluminous report, with perhaps one or two dissenting reports, and be discharged with thanks? The only recommendation he can offer is to say that 'If citizens do not like a law, their duty as honest men and women is to discourage its violation; their right is openly to work for its repeal.'

"Mr. Hoover speaks easily of the right of citizens who disapprove any law 'openly to work for its repeal,' but he must realize the inherent difficulty of this for unorganized individuals. In the first place, for some obscure reason in the American character, laws are rarely repealed; they are allowed simply to lapse in observance.

"If the will of a sufficiently large minority is deliberately and persistently thwarted by the majority, revolt of some sort is inevitable.

ENFORCEMENT IMPOSSIBLE

"No one believes for a moment that prohibition will result in civil war; but it is obvious that this particular law is against the will of so large a minority, if it is a minority, of the people, that thorough and impartial enforcement is impossible, and that the old American weapon of nullification will continue to be used against it.

It is evident that not even the United States government can patrol eight thousand miles of boundary and put a policeman in every one of twenty million homes. A very considerable number of our people consider the law to be unwise, unjust, and tyrannical. Throughout the whole of English and American history there have always been men who had the courage to defy such laws, and, largely depending upon their ultimate success, history has recorded them as patriots or malefactors.

"I do not say that the Eighteenth Amendment is of such a character as to warrant infringement of it in the name of patriotism, but I do believe that it is unwise, unjust, and it does seem to me to come perilously near being tyrannical.

ONLY ONE PATH

"If Mr. Hoover merely tells the American people to obey every absurd law, every unenforced law, every unequally and unjustly enforced law, every unenforceable law, that is now on the statute books of the nation and our 48 sovereign states, he will get but slight results.

"If, on the other hand, he will undertake to show the people what underlies their problem, and assume the leadership in a crusade to reform the very foundations of their life—the rotten foundations that are at the bottom of the problem of our lawlessness—then he will prove the leader for whom America waits, and patriotism and nobility may again rise above efficiency and wealth. By that path only can America regain respect for law and for herself."

Death Cheats Girl in Four Romances

Birmingham, Eng., June 21—Death has four times thwarted Miss Madge Gunner, a governess in this city, of becoming a wife.

After the death of her fourth fiance, just two days before the wedding day, Miss Gunner forever renounced the idea of marriage.

This succession of love tragedies started during the war when Miss Gunner became engaged to a young officer. On the night he was to have left the front line trenches to come home to her, he was killed by a rifle grenade.

"My next fiance," Miss Gunner said in an interview, "was an airman. He was killed in a crash on the Saturday before the Monday on which we were to have been married.

"Four years later I became engaged to an engineer. Two days before our wedding we had lunch together. He left me at the end of the meal to inspect a building under construction. He was killed by a crane."

Additional sorrows have come into Miss Gunner's life during the past year. Her father and mother, both in Australia, died without her having seen them for years.

Mellon to Remain at Desk This Summer

Washington, June 21—Secretary Mellon probably will not go abroad this summer and much of the time will be with President Hoover in the heat and humidity of Washington.

The secretary said he did not plan an extended vacation, but would make brief visits to his home in Pittsburgh and might take a short rest later.

PAIR JAILED FOR THEATER GAS

Pawtucket, R. I., June 21—Frank P. McMurray, 27, and Mrs. Anna Lavigne, alias Anna Kelly, 19, both of Providence, were each sentenced to six months in jail for releasing tear gas in a theater here June 2. They were arraigned in District Court on charges of having disturbed an audience.

The couple are also wanted in connection with a similar disturbance in a New Bedford theater.

Not Bleached

Children—Invalids

Ceresota Flour is a wonderful health flour because it is ground from the finest wheat obtainable. This is proved by the fact that it is not bleached. Ceresota is especially recommended for the diet of children and invalids.

THE NEW FRO-JOY 2-FLAVOR PINT PACKAGE

SHARP bidding, concentrated play, shrewd leads and successful finesses. Then relaxation—sparkling conversation—and, best of all, refreshments.

And what could be more welcome than the delicious and colorful combination of Fro-joy ice cream in the new 2-flavor pint package?

Clever hostesses have long since discovered how perfect Fro-joy really is. With its delicately blended flavors and creamy smoothness, it makes the ideal refreshment for any type of entertainment. And consider its purity! All the ingredients for packaged Fro-joy are minutely tested for quality. All the utensils are sterilized nightly with live steam. Every package is wrapped three times and sealed to guarantee this goodness right into your home.

No matter what you pay, you cannot buy a more delicious or more wholesome ice cream than in the new Fro-joy 2-flavor pint package.

General Ice Cream Corporation.

THIS WEEK

THE NEW FRO-JOY 2-FLAVOR PINT PACKAGE CONTAINS

CHERRY AND BUTTERSCOTCH

"These two ice creams make a charming color combination and both flavors are delicious, although not often combined. The refreshing fruit quality of the cherry is a piquant complement to the honeyed sweetness of the butterscotch."
—Alice Bradley

And Fro-joy is always available in pint packages in vanilla or chocolate—or both combined—and in Neapolitan, which is vanilla, chocolate, and strawberry. An all-year favorite is vanilla, served with berries, chocolate sauce, or sliced fruits.

WAR IS UPHELD FOR NATIONAL SAFETY

River Forest, Ill., June 21. War although held abhorrent, is justifiable and necessary when national safety is concerned, it was emphasized at the 34th triennial convention of the Evangelical Lutheran Missouri Synod.

"The Lutheran Church deplores war and the unspeakable sorrow which comes in the wake of such national catastrophes," reads the code of belief of the Lutheran Church released at the convention. "The very thought of this brutal carnage must be repulsive to every sincere Christian who knows the admonition of his Lord: 'Love one another.'

"But any civil government is obligated to protect the lives and property of its citizens," the statement continued. "To cry 'Peace!' when there is no peace, to do away entirely with national defenses and safety, and to declare in an absolute manner, 'No more wars!' is a procedure which is contrary to the scriptural admonition and national prudence."

The convention appropriated $189,000 for the expansion and building program of the Concordia Theological Seminary at St. Louis from $239,000 to $5000.

Dr. Frederick Pfotenhauer of Chicago, who has served as president of the Synod since 1911, was re-elected.

604 GRADUATE AT SOMERVILLE

In the presence of parents, relatives and friends, whose numbers completely filled Tremont Temple, 604 seniors of Somerville high school were graduated. The class was the largest that has been graduated from Somerville high school since the inauguration of the three-year term.

Rev. Frank M. Swaffield, pastor of the West Somerville Baptist Church, read the prayer. Charles L. Quinn delivered the class oration which was followed by the singing of Beethoven's "The Heavens Are Telling" by the class and the class poem written and spoken by Lloyd E. Hawes. Next came a cello solo by Ines M. Arzillo.

Rev. T. Everett Fairchild of Boston University spoke on "Education Plus." Later the diplomas were presented by Dr. Francis J. Fitzpatrick, vice chairman of the school committee. The exercises concluded with the singing of the class ode, written by C. Sumner Spalding, and a cheer led by John J. Hayes, Jr., president of the class.

Minot District Pupils Give Entertainment

Pupils of the Minot school district, including the Minot school and the Thomas J. Kenny school of the Neponset section, presented their annual exhibition and entertainment in Minot school hall. More than 200 children participated in the spectacle and approximately 800 parents and relatives attended the function.

The presentation took the form of a demonstration of work done through the school year. Music was provided by a children's orchestra and a regulation fashion show was put on by the girl pupils of both schools who paraded the sewing work they have been engaged upon.

REVERE HONORS STATE LODGE LEADER

Court State and religious leaders joined with 400 members and friends of Court Jane [illegible] Catholic Daughters of America of Revere in a testimonial reception and dinner to Miss Marianne I Collins, newly elected State regent of the order.

The auditorium of the Revere City Hall was taxed to capacity by the friends who came to pay tribute to the popular Revere girl.

Miss Collins was hailed as one of the foremost leaders of Catholic women in Massachusetts and as being well fitted to head the State branch of the largest body of Catholic women in the United States.

Mayor Andrew A. Casassa in bringing the greetings of the city said: "Revere is proud to hail Miss Collins as one of its citizens. We are proud of the work she has done. We are proud of the honor that has come to her and through her to Revere.

"Revere believes in honors of this character. It is honors of this character that will make Revere one of the foremost cities in the Commonwealth."

Mrs. Elizabeth P. Lee of Court Jane Lee was toastmistress and presented the guest of the evening with a basket of roses and a gift on behalf of the court members.

Miss Collins thanked the members for the testimonial and promised that she would exert every energy to conduct the affairs of the order with the same efficiency that characterized the administration of Mrs. John J. Salmon of Cambridge, the retiring State regent.

Other speakers included the Rev. William B. Finnegan, State chaplain; Mrs. John J. Salmon, national director; Senator Conde Brodbine, Rep. Thomas Carroll, Rep. Augustine Airola, State Deputy Elizabeth Hennessey, Harry H. Kay, Dr. Edward J. O'Brien and James F. Powers.

Congratulatory messages were received from Senator David I. Walsh, Congressman Charles L. Underhill, State Deputy John E. Swift of the Knights of Columbus, Rev. Richard Cushing, Rev. William Tierney and Rev. William V. Chamberlain.

Mrs. Elizabeth P. Lee was chairman of the committee on arrangements. Assisting were Mrs. Mary Sweeney, Mrs. Marion O'Brien, Mrs. Mary Mayo, Mrs. Irene McDonald, Mrs. Mary Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Dorothy Drummey, Mrs. Josephine Collins, Mrs. Marie Shea, Mrs. Theresa Hourihan, Mrs. Mary McDonough, Mrs. Ella Barry, Mrs. Emeline Smith, Mrs. Mary Gagan, Mrs. Helen Hill, Mrs. Mae Sullivan, Mrs. Anna McMasters, Mrs. Catherine Sullivan, Mrs. Annie Colton, Mrs. Gladys Hawkes, Mrs. Louise Forcella, Mrs. Mae Farrell, Mrs. Helen Duplace, Mrs. Mary Phair, Miss Helen Fitzgerald, Gertrude Cronin, Catherine A. Collins, Margaret Sullivan, Lena Mahoney, Mary Baldwin, Jennie Mennina, Frances Phair, Agnes Fenlon, Alice Hannigan, Ellen Coughlin, Rita Sullivan and Catherine McCarrick.

U. S. Woman Seeks to Free Sex in India

Paris, June 21 (INS)—Juristic and political equality with their sisters in the Occident may eventually be obtained for the women of India through the efforts of an American woman, Mrs. William F. McKnight of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Mrs. McKnight has just returned from an extensive tour of India where she studied conditions, with the view of helping to soften the lot of the Indian woman.

MAGICAL FEATS CHEER ORPHANS

The third of a series of entertainments under the auspices of the Boston Evening American was given by Blackstone, the magician appearing at Loew's Orpheum Theater, when he visited the St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum on Camden st.

Ten-year-old Daniel MacGinley of West Lenox st. was called to the platform by Blackstone and told that he was to be turned into a rabbit. When the magician waved his arms above his head and began to pronounce the magical words, the youngster bolted for the door and it took all of Blackstone's speed and strength to get him back on the platform.

The howl that went up from the gathering of orphans was assurance enough that they appreciated the joke.

Today Blackstone will complete his hospital tour with a visit to the New England Peabody Home for Crippled Children in Newton.

BARGAIN DAY AT REVERE

Tomorrow is Dollar Day at Revere Beach. That means that a ticket purchased at one dollar permits the holder to visit and enjoy 27 shows, rides and other attractions at this popular seashore resort.

The amusement division of the Revere Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring this bargain day as part of its program for the 1929 season of providing entertainment for the residents of New England.

PICK STUDENT FOR EDISON TESTS

Hampton, N. H., June 21—Walter M. Perkins, 16, Hampton academy student, has been selected as New Hampshire candidate in the Edison competitive examinations, which will result in choice of a youth to be educated at the inventor's expense.

Walter M. May, deputy commissioner of education, made the announcement today. Fourteen boys from all sections of the state took the tests for intelligence, chemistry and mathematics ratings.

Carroll Johnson of Antrim high school was named first alternate.

Athletic Events at Legion Field Day

Special police arrangements have been made to care for the crowd expected at Norumbega park Saturday when the New England Women's track and swimming championships will be featured during the American Legion barbecue and field day. In addition to the championships events there will be a doll carriage parade, a street masquerade and a rolling pin throwing contest for women. In the evening the First Corps Cadets will stage an anti-aircraft demonstration.

New Equipment for U. S. Senate Will Cut Out 'Hot Air'

Washington, June 21 (AP)—Equipment is being installed in the Senate during the recess to reduce considerably the amount of hot air that heretofore has characterized that chamber in warm weather.

Its efficiency proven in the House of Representatives, the new air conditioning system will be in readiness for the Senate at the end of the recess in August.

SOVIET TO BE RECOGNIZED

London, June 21—The Daily Herald, labor organ, says the new British government will take steps to resume diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia as soon as possible without waiting to consult the United States' attitude toward Russia.

The government is also represented as anxious to adhere as soon as possible to the Optional Clause pledging Britain to accept jurisdiction of the Hague Court in a large class of international disputes.

SUBMIT CENSUS PLAN FOR BAY STATE

Washington, June 21—As an indication that the taking of the 1930 census will be on a fairly strict political basis, the census bureau has submitted its plan for Massachusetts to the two senators and the 16 members of Congress for approval.

Final announcement as to the lines of the supervisory districts, and the cities in which headquarters are to be located, will be withheld until each member of Congress has had an opportunity to criticise the bureau's plans.

There will be 16 supervisory districts in Massachusetts and, roughly, they will follow the lines of the congressional districts. Each district will have a general headquarters, manned by a supervisor, a couple of assistant supervisors and a number of clerical assistants. There will be one enumerator to each 1800 persons in rural communities, and one to 2500 in the cities.

Cities selected for supervisory districts in the original plan are Pittsfield, Springfield, Worcester, Fitchburg, Lowell, Lawrence, Salem, Lynn, Cambridge, Somerville, Boston (2), Newton, Brockton, Fall River and New Bedford.

The best jobs are those of supervisors, these gentlemen will receive about $2000 for three months' hard work, will be on call for three additional months to clean up odds and ends.

The assistant supervisors will receive from $1200 to $1500 and for the enumerators there will be a sliding scale which will run from four cents a name in the cities up to 10 cents in thinly-settled rural districts. The bureau estimates that the enumerators will make from $5 to $10 a day for a period of two or three weeks.

Prizes Offered for Collegiate Dances

Employes of Turner Center System, Inc., will make merry tonight with whist and dancing in Pitman's Academy, Medford, the affair being under the auspices of the recently formed benefit association. One of the features is a collegiate dancing contest of which many fine prizes are offered. Delegations from all the company's branches in Maine and Massachusetts are planning to be present.

Thomas P. Kelley is chairman of the committee in charge. Those assisting him include Mr. Parker, Mrs. Fardie, Mr. Driscoll, Miss Arline Mercier, Mrs. Hodgdon, Mr. Ryer, Miss Frances Mercier, Andrew Oriole, James Pelrine, Miss Alice Timothy, Miss Ruth Anderson, Mrs. Allen and Miss Lea La Flamme.

2 Electrocuted in New Chicago Jail

Chicago, June 21 (INS)—The first electrocutions in Cook county's new $7,000,000 jail took place today when Napoleon Glover, 19, and Morgan Swan, 2[illegible], negroes, were put to death for the murder of Charles Mellock during a drug store holdup seven months ago.

Swan was the first to die. He was pronounced dead at 1:10 a. m. Glover was placed in the chair at 1:16 a. m. and was pronounced dead two minutes later.

Long Terms for Idaho Kidnapers

Lewiston, Idaho, June 21—After they had pleaded guilty to abducting of Lieut.-Gov. W. B. Kinne, three men were sentenced here to prison terms ranging from ten to 25 years. A fourth member was given a sentence from one to 25 years.

George Norman, 37, Seattle, the fifth prisoner, was said by members of the band to have been their leader, although not involved directly in the kidnaping. He was sentenced to serve from one to two years as an accessory after the fact.

Urges One-Way Rule at Blind Crossing

As a precautionary move in anticipation of the opening of the new fire station at Washington st and Center ave., Newton, Mayor Edwin O. Childs will urge the board of aldermen to make Center ave. a one-way street from Washington st. in the direction of Center st.

The mayor's purpose in advocating the regulation is to eliminate the danger of collisions between fire apparatus and automobiles coming out of Center ave. into Washington st. The view of Washington st. from Center ave. is obstructed by a railroad bridge.

4 Watertown Firemen Win Promotions

Lieut. William C. Shark and Pilotfish Caught in Seine

A shark and its pilotfish were caught in a seine by the Alden operating off South Shoals lightship, Nantucket, and the shark, weighing 300 pounds, made a sort [illegible] of the mackerel before it could be extricated from the mesh. The pilotfish, a novelty in these waters, tipped the scales at nearly three pounds and measured 1½ feet in length. Fishermen assume the pilotfish and shark were trailing mackerel schools up from the South and had made a memorable killing the last few weeks.

$5,000,000 FOR 162 NEW PLANES

Washington, June 21—Contracts totalling approximately $5,000,000 for 162 new airplanes for the army air corps were approved by F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war for aeronautics.

The orders call for 90 new pursuit planes from the Boeing Aircraft Co. of Seattle, Wash.; 41 new two-seated observation planes, and 28 attack planes from the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co.

Other contracts were for three new experimental type planes to [illegible] the course of the [illegible] two hundred three-seater [illegible] of the observation type [illegible] a two-seater [illegible] pursuit plane, [illegible] Aircraft Corporation of Baltimore.

The experimental planes will be delivered to the air corps material division at Wright Field, Dayton, where they will be put through [illegible] tests to determine their suitability for army use. Both are radical departures from service types now in use. Present type observation planes are two seated single motored ships while all pursuit planes now in services are high speed single seated ships.

Mystery Driver Found in Hospital

Pittsfield, June 21—Police Chief Walter M. Stannard of Stockbridge has learned that the driver involved in the mystery crash at Park and Elm sts. in this town Monday, is at St. Luke's Hospital.

The name of the man given is George H. Reynolds of Woburn, an employe of the Federal Department of Entomology. Reynolds was employed in Norfolk, Ct., and was on his way there when his car struck a [illegible]. After the accident Reynolds disappeared. The car was wrecked.

MAYOR SEES TREE MARKED

Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, with his wife and son, Clark, were interested spectators as Bruce Gale nailed the marker on the elm tree in connection with "marking the tree" exercises at Eliot school, Jamaica Plain. The school is the oldest in the State.

Buses to Replace Stoneham Trolleys

Selectmen of Wakefield, Winchester and Stoneham have been notified by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. that electric cars will be discontinued on the Wakefield-Stoneham-Winchester car line on July 7, and that motor coaches will be substituted.

The change has been timed particularly to coincide with the rebuilding of Albion st. in Wakefield and Elm st. in Stoneham, the streets constituting the through route from Wakefield to Stoneham.

FRAUD BROKERS BAILED OUT

New York, June 21—The Locke brothers, who were sentenced to three years in jail last April for stock market frauds, are free under bail pending an appeal.

Their admission to $10,000 bail each was obtained from Federal Judge Martin T. Manton, May 29. They previously had been refused bail by Federal Judge John C. Knox, who presided at their trial.

Along with the two brothers, their partner in their brokerage firm, who was sentenced to four years in Atlanta also was let out under bail. The trio was alleged to have defrauded customers of more than $5,000,000.

Judge Manton in allowing bail said he believed the defendants were prosecuting their appeal in good faith and that a hearing could be held.

ESCAPED PAIR COVER TRAIL

Brentwood, N. H., June 21—No trace has been found of Kenneth Marshall of Derry and Charles McQuillan of Exeter, who escaped while working in a strawberry field of the Rockingham County House of Correction.

Supt. W. H. Stiles of the local institution is inclined to believe that the two prisoners, who previously escaped May 19 by prying the bars from their cell, are some miles from here. All New England seaport cities have been notified to be on the lookout for the escaped prisoners. After their getaway last month they were apprehended at Portland, Me., on the eve when both were to enlist in the army.

Tune Up New Plane for Rome Flight

Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., June 21—The monoplane North Star, which replaced the plane Green Flash in the projected flight of Roger Q. Williams and Lewis Yancey from Old Orchard, Me., to Rome, was tuned up by mechanics at the Wright Aeronautical hangar. Williams and Yancey said they would fly the craft either to Old Orchard, or Mitchel Field, L. I., some time before Saturday.

This Mother has time for her Children

A MODERN gas range with Heat Control gives the mother of today ample time to enjoy her children and to guide them through their formative years.

Even when social duties press and there are dinner parties to prepare, she may still have her afternoons of leisure.

She puts her dinner into the oven in the early afternoon and lets Heat Control watch and tend it for her. At six she finds her dishes perfectly cooked, waiting to be served.

A chart tells her what foods may be cooked in the same length of time—with the same amount of heat. She merely sets the Heat Control at the temperature recommended and Gas—the Better Fuel—does the rest.

This modern way of cooking is so much easier, so much less confining, that every mother ought to use it to obtain the hours she needs to spend every day with her children.

Call on your gas company and ask for a demonstration of the newest ranges. There is a fresh world of leisure for you in their use.

Cook with Gas ..THE BETTER FUEL FOR QUICK-HEAT AND ECONOMY

Ask your gas company for free booklet, "Gas — The Servant of Mankind." It tells the romantic story of gas — how to select and care for gas appliances — and contains new ideas for housekeeping. Write, phone or call for your copy.

Any gas appliance may be purchased on easy terms

Flavor WINS

That "can't-be-copied" flavor has made Kellogg's Corn Flakes the largest selling, ready-to-eat cereal in the world. 12,000,000 people enjoy them every day. You'll find their extra crispness especially inviting these spring mornings. Try them with canned peaches and milk or cream.

Order a package of Kellogg's Corn Flakes from your grocer. Great for lunch or for the children's evening meal. So easy to digest. Serve with milk or cream and add fruits or honey.

Always get Kellogg's—the original Corn Flakes.

Order at hotels, restaurants—on diners. Oven-fresh in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

FLIGHTS and FLIERS

by George W. Hamblin

The 26th Division Air Service, Massachusetts National Guard, will make its summer camp of two weeks, beginning July 7, at the Cape Cod field operated by Skyways, Inc., according to Lieut. Crocker Snow, president of the company. He stated that the air service division of the National Guard will find a field second to none when it arrives at Skyways airport down on the Cape. This is the first time the National Guard Air Service has picked a Cape Cod field for its summer camp duty.

Lieut. Snow reports that Lieut. Jack Langley is chief pilot at Skyways summer flying school at Marston's Mills. Langley is assisted by Capt. H. N. Carlson, dean of the flying school. The field occupies 170 acres, and is reputed by Skyways to be free from fog nine-tenths of the time.

Lieut. Snow

At present there are four students taking the summer training but, according to Johnnie Houghy, there will be 12 more starting Monday.

On the subject of Skyways, "Swede" Parker, operations manager and pilot at Skyways' Wareham field, and Tom Goldie is running the works on the passenger line down at that field on the Cape.

Crocker Snow also reports that Mr. and Mrs. Lester Watson are students in the flying school operated by the company at the Boston Airport. The Watsons live at Chestnut Hill.

And as for the sales department of Skyways, Al Marhison is trying his best to dispose of the various airplanes for which Skyways are agents.

Edgar Stone, treasurer of the Eastern States Aircraft Corp., dropped into the Boston airport with the report that his company is operating the flying field at Pittsfield to great advantage. Stone was formerly connected with the Springfield Airport Corp. and has been running the air meet at Fisk Park, Springfield, since last Fourth of July. Stone is making a go of the flying at Pittsfield, and states that the company's third Waco will soon be flying again.

There's one young fellow at the airport who deserves a lot of credit for his work of the past year, and that is Ken Hurley, mechanic with the Bay State Flying Service. Ken has been down at Fall River with the Puritan Air Transport Corp., showing them how to operate their Kinner engined American Eagle. Hurley says that the Kinner job performs as well down there as it does at the airport here. He has been in Fall River for the past two week ends, and says that passengers down there are fighting for the chance to fly in the speedy American Eagle.

The Kinner engined American Eagle used at Fall River was purchased from Fred Pereira of the Bay State Flying Service. Fred McLean is president of the company at Fall River, and Joe Howarh chief pilot. The field is at Portsmouth, R. I. with offices at Fall River.

Olcott Payson, stock holder in Skyways, had a Moth set up on pontoons at the Moth factory in Lowell and was to fly down to the Harvard-Yale boat race at New London today. Payson intends to use the Moth for general joy riding in front of his home in Yarmouth Foreside, which borders on Casco Bay. Payson has not left the commercial fliers' ranks by any means, and states that before many months he will be back at the task of teaching newcomers how to get off the ground and back again.

Olcott Payson

Six members of the National Guard Air Service, all of whom are sergeants, have formed the Waco associates, and are piling up their time in a Waco 10 purchased from George Haven, of Lowell. The six boys who are combining business with pleasure are Wally Holbrook, Lawrence Murray, Ralph O'Neil, John Kelley, Joseph Cox and William Membrino. The boys have bought a very fine Waco, and can be seen pushing up the hours every night after their work with the National Guard is over.

Second Lieut. J. A. Geer has reported to the regular Army Air Corps station at the airport and will have charge of the Reserve officers' flying from now on, relieving Capt. Christopher Ford of that duty. Capt. Ford is commander of the Boston Airport, Army Air Corps, and has enough to do along with being air officer of the First Corps Area.

Curtiss Flying Service reports the flying time for the Nantucket trip, which is run every day. The week-end runs were also announced by Mason Sears. The two services are:

BOSTON TO NANTUCKET
Daily Except Sundays
Eastern Standard Daylight Saving Time

	Leave P M	Leave A M
Boston	4 40	9 20
Hyannis	5 30	8 50
Martha's Vineyard	5 40	8 20

BOSTON TO BAR HARBOR
Week-End Service—Up Friday, Down Monday
Eastern Standard Daylight Saving Time

	Leave P M	Leave A M
Boston	5 00	8 3[illegible]
Portland	6 [illegible]0	7 4[illegible]
Rockland	6 45	6 [illegible]
Bar Harbor	7 [illegible]5	6 00

These schedules are subject to weather conditions and change without notice.

H. E. "Wally" Wallis, who was formerly chief of maintenance for the Boston Airport Corp., Curtiss Flying Service, and Colonial Air Transport, Inc., and who holds down the same job now with East Coast Aircraft Sales Corp., is hard at work on the Travel Airs owned by East Coast at Muller Field, Revere. Wallis has his hands full, along with Bill Sanders, setting up airplanes for delivery. Most of the ships received from the Travel Air factory are in carload shipments, and Wally's job is to see that they are set up and rigged and are all ready for Russell Boardman or Fred Ames to test hop before they are sent to the buyers.

"LAWS AND WOMEN often make scoundrels of men when they are not," observes ED. HOWE in the Boston Sunday Advertiser next Sunday—and he makes other pertinent observations as well.

GARDEN PARTY TO AID CHURCH

A garden party under the auspices of St. Polycarp's parish, Somerville, will be held tomorrow afternoon and evening on the parish hall field at Temple and Jaques sts., Somerville. There will be a baby beauty contest at 3 o'clock, for which three prizes have been donated. There will be 10 tables for the bazar, and dancing and a varied entertainment will be held throughout the afternoon and evening in the parish hall.

The proceeds will go toward the new church building fund. The committee in charge of the affair comprises Mrs. Margaret Dow, Mrs. Renner, Mrs. Steele, Mrs. McManus, Mrs. Doonan, Miss M. Collins, Miss M. Morrison, Miss May Looney, Mrs. S. Candage, Mrs. Myra C. Donovan, the Misses Reynolds, Robert Radochia and James Campbell.

Former Maine Solon Farm Board Favorite

Washington, June 21—New England has apparently produced few candidates for appointment to the farm board. One, however, very much in the running, is former Congressman Ira G. Hersey of Houlton, Me., from the heart of the Aroostook County potato belt.

Sabbath Blue Laws Hit by Lutherans as Evil

Chicago, June 21 (AP). Over-strict Sabbath observance and blue laws were condemned today at the 34th triennial convention of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod as not faithfully interpreting Christianity and as causing harm.

"The Christian religion is not a creed of morbid restrictions and dampening prohibition," it was declared in a statement of the church's code of belief. "The Lutheran Church believes that those teachers in the Outward Christian Church who insist upon the Old Testament spirit and legislation for a day and age when 'old things are passed away' are not only misinterpreting the evident intention of Our Lord, but are guilty of the more serious sin of keeping men away from Christ."

In denouncing efforts to restore Puritanical Sabbath observances the Lutheran confessions asserted that the "Sabbath era" has passed away. "Further legislation can only restrain," the statement adds, "it cannot reform. Laws can remove temptation to do wrong, but they cannot make a man will to do right. They cacnot close up base ball parks and movie houses, but they cacnencot make a man temperate.

"Only the spirit of God, working through the gospel, can produce real morality and righteousness."

21 CHILDREN ARE CURED

Announcement was made today that 21 of the 4[illegible] children who have been at the Prendergast Preventorium since the close of the summer camp last August have made such improvement they were recommended for discharge to their homes. Their places will be filled by a group entering June 28 for the summer months, when there will be a total of 100 children.

The school department has furnished three teachers and a cooking teacher for the class of older girls and a manual training instructor for older boys. The counsellors will arrive June 27 for the summer work.

Mexican Mill Union Fights Machinery

Mexico City, June 21 (AP)—The Federation of Textile Workers, ending their convention here, adopted a resolution opposing installation of modern machinery in Mexican plants and favoring retention of old-fashioned machinery. It was said use of modern machinery would reduce the number of employes.

BEACH SOCIETY TO MEET AT HAMPTON

Hampton, N. H., June 21—When the American Shore and Beach Preservation Society holds its mid-year meeting at Hampton Beach on June 24 and 25 it will be the first time that this organization has held a meeting in New England. Many important and vital subjects of interest to the coastal New England States will be discussed.

Among those present will be Gov. Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire; Frederic E. Everett, New Hampshire Commissioner of Highways; Dr. James W. Goldthwaite of Dartmouth, Gen. Richard K. Hale of the Massachusetts Department of Public Works, Fernando W. Hartford, Mayor of Portsmouth; Gov. William T. Gardiner of Maine and Gov. Frank G. Allen of Massachusetts. All will address the gathering in the course of the two-day convention.

The appointment of committees will be one of the most important pieces of business on the Monday program, followed by a clambake given by the town of Hampton.

The meeting will be conducted by the president of the association, J. Spencer Smith, and an address will be given by Victor Gelineau on general beach problems. A banquet at the Hotel Ashworth will wind up the two-day program.

Farm By-products Research Is Urged

Washington, June 21 (AP)—Holding that the by-products of the farm are as much the business of the farmer as are the main products, Secretary Hyde believes that farmers co-operative organizations should and will take an active interest in agricultural by-products research.

Stowaway on Yellow Bird Glad He's on His Way Home

ue, over which I was flying just a week ago.

Paris is a gay city, but I probably would have enjoyed it a lot more if only I had had some friends of mine here with whom to go around and see the sights.

An awful lot has been said about these French women. I would probably appreciate them better if they spoke English. Still, they can't beat some of the girls we've got back home in Portland.

The jewelry stores along the Rue de la Paix certainly open a fellow's eyes. I don't think they could keep so much jewelry openly exposed in New York or Chicago without being burglarized.

CAFE EXPERIENCE

I had an interesting experience recently with a man in a French cafe. While I was sitting with some friends, a man walked up and said to me:

"You are Schreiber, aren't you?"

"No," I answered, "my name's Smith."

"Well," he replied, "you certainly resemble Schreiber."

"I wonder whether I'm fortunate?" I ventured.

"You'd think so if you were in his shoes."

"Oh," shaking my head, "I wouldn't care particularly about that."

We let it go at that, but before I left someone who wanted to play a trick on me definitely identified me, and I had to sign a long list of autographs.

I must say that the Lottis have treated me royally. I had a beautiful suite on the second floor, with French windows and balcony overlooking the Place Vendome, the gardens of the Tuileries and the Rue de Castiglione.

I think I am one of the few Americans having difficulty in paying for things in Paris. Shirts, socks, ties, shoes and hats have been literally thrown at me. I went shopping to get a suit and coat for traveling. When I was recognized I had difficulty in buying anything as I was overwhelmed with requests for autographs by the salesmen.

LOTS TO DRINK

In one big shop the manager took me into his private office, and said:

"All good Americans should drink champagne."

"As a good American," I replied, "I should refuse."

He laughed, and then I accepted a glass. I got away without drinking it, however. Had I consumed all the liquor offered me, I would have imagined I'd been flying around Paris, too. I have had enough invitations to keep me going for six weeks, but I couldn't take advantage of them because of my departure.

It'll be good to hear a real language spoken again, including some good old American slang, instead of all this "parlez vous" stuff that has me groggy.

I would have liked to do some sightseeing, but how could I, when everywhere I went I was requested for souvenirs, autographs and bombarded with questions about the flight. But some day, I hope to be able to return to Paris—not in an airplane—and take in the things I would like to see.

Wednesday, for the first time since reaching this gay capital, I found myself with some money belonging to me. It was quite a contrast to the fifteen cents I had in my pocket when I boarded the plane. I left my watch and all my valuables with my friends at Old Orchard and until yesterday I used Lotti's things.

GIFTS FOR FLIERS

Among the things I purchased just before leaving were a traveling bag, two shirts and a topcoat—just the barest necessities for me to get back to the States, because I prefer American clothes.

The things from which I got the greatest pleasure are the small remembrances I purchased for my three flight companions—cigarette lighters for Lotti and Assolant, and a billfold for Le Fevre, who doesn't smoke.

But I am leaving behind the one thing I treasured most highly. From the moment when I landed, I had in my possession one of the two American flags on the Yellow Bird. While we were being hauled around the field at Le Bourget, it was torn almost to tatters by people grabbing at it and tearing off bits as souvenirs. Somebody crazy about souvenirs must have followed that flag pretty closely. After two days in Paris, the flag disappeared from my hotel rooms. I was sorry, because I wished to take it home.

My mail consists of many people claiming relationship, but I have had no time to look them up, although at some future date I hope to do so.

GIVEN FLOWERS

I have also seen the international aspect of the press at Paris. One morning I was awakened early. In the sitting room where my mail awaited me there were about a dozen correspondents of different nationalities. I was spoken to in German, Hungarian and make-shift French alternately.

Among the many places I particularly remember is the American movie theater in Paris. We went to see the pictures of the trial flights of the Yellow Bird before the take-off. Later we were called upon the stage, where we were greatly applauded by the audience and handed bunches of flowers by the management.

Incidentally, those flowers were another thing we didn't see again.

But now I am looking forward to getting home. Only a few friends there knew I was leaving in the plane. They are Maurice Cox, Harry Citran—commonly called "Grapefruit," Dave Herman and a couple of the very personal friends. The only girl who came down to Old Orchard with us was Rose Cox, my best friend's sister. Her last words to me were:

"You know I don't want you to do anything like this, but if you must risk your life, I wish you the best of luck."

Curley to Be Orioles' Convention Orator

Fred J. Seams, supreme organizer, will lead thousands of Orioles to Boston for their 10th annual convention August 5, 6, 7 and 8, with headquarters at the Elks' Hotel. A parade through downtown streets will be one of the features of the convention. The committee in charge promises many floats and bands. Former Mayor James M. Curley, a member of Hub Nest No. 14, will address the convention Wednesday, August 7. Other features for the guests will be visits to historic spots throughout Greater Boston, including Concord and Lexington.

Boy, 14, Is Stricken With Rare Disease

New York, June 21 (INS)—A 14-year-old New York boy today was reported afflicted with kala-azar, dreaded blood-eating disease almost unknown in America, and gifts of blood are needed to save his life. The boy, George Mosher, already has taken blood in six transfusions.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

World's Sword Champion Dead

Budapest, June 21 (AP)—Col. Edouard Terstyanszky, world champion sword fencer and winner of an Olympic prize at his chosen sport, died today at a sanatorium here after a motorcycle accident early in the week in which both his legs weer fractured. He was 38 years old.

$5000 for Memorial Plans

Nancy Is Warned by Mother of Marrying a Poor Man

CHAPTER I.

THE boy and the girl walked close together up the grassy path to the house.

Not 70 feet from the street where his car was parked, to the house where behind deeply drawn shades, her family was "waiting up." Not 70 feet, and it had taken them half an hour to reach the bird-path half way up.

"Wonderful night," he mumbled, suddenly conscious that he ought to say something. "Wonderful night. Too nice to go in."

"Yes," she sighed, "but it's late. It must be awfully late."

He fumbled for his watch, opened it, and returned it to his pocket without having noticed the time. She moved on slowly, pulling at the blossoms that bordered the path. He followed, slower still.

And now they had come to the steps, and she had turned, starry-eyed and a little tremulous, to say good night. "I wish it weren't so late—I'd ask you in——"

The slim little hand that had plucked at the flowers came to rest on his arm. She was faintly smiling, searching his troubled face with dark, velvety eyes.

"Just for a few minutes, please!" he begged.

She shook her head. "No, I couldn't—not tonight. I'll have to run, it's so late. It's been wonderful." Her mouth quivered. "And I'll see you soon——"

"Tomorrow. Tomorrow night sure."

She nodded, and made a little movement, as if to slip from his detaining grasp. Their hands touched. "Well, if you won't let me come in," he began. And suddenly he was kissing her, hungrily, as if he could never let her go.

She found her voice first. "Good night—Mat!"

Awkwardly he reached for the cap he had dropped. "Good night, Nancy."

He turned and retraced his steps down the path. She waited, shivering slightly in her light dress, until she heard the sound of his motor starting. When its rumbling had died away she went into the house.

They were all in the living room, papa, mama, and Louise, all waiting up for her.

Papa lifted pudgy fingers and pinched her cheek. "Have a good time, baby?"

"Why didn't you invite the young man in?" mama asked mildly. "You could have made chocolate and there's some of that pound cake——"

But it was Louise, as always, who spoke what the family really had on its mind. "I like that Tully boy," she said in her uncompromising, matter-of-fact way. "He's different from the others. Means

Llenroc Co-Eds Entertain Friends

Hundreds of friends of members of the Llenroc Co-Eds were entertained at an open house, which marked the closing of the club season.

The Waumbeck House was the scene of merriment, and the untiring open house committee included Jack Shair, Davd Gorfinkle, Eva Goldman, Lena Fefferling, Mollie Bonner and Louis Segal. The evening was spent most enjoyably by all. The president, Al Becker, together with the hospitality committee, greeted the guests.

A delightful program was arranged by the dramatic group. A melodrama, under the direction of Miss Lena Fefferling, was very cleverly presented by Ben Rosenbloom, Jack Shair, Julius Levenson, Leo Teplitz and Miss Rose Barsh.

Master of ceremonies for the evening was the past president, David Gorfinkle.

Brookline Man Weds in Marion

Marion, June 21—Miss Mildred D. Speare, daughter of Mrs. Alice L. Speare of Boston, and Russell Coolidge, son of Mrs. Harriet C. Coolidge of Brookline, were married by the Rev. Alfred R. Hill at St. Gabriel's Episcopal Church here. There were no bridal attendants and only the immediate families were present.

There was an informal wedding breakfast at the Kittansett Club here. Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge will tour the Great Lakes and Canadian Rockies on their wedding trip.

Waltham Teachers' Club Elects Officers

Miss Annie C. Pottle of the Bright school has been elected president of the Waltham Teachers' club. The other officers chosen are: Charles W. Goodrich of the Waltham High school, vice-president; Miss Lulu E. Payson of the North Junior High school, treasurer; Miss Elsie E. Turner of the South Junior High school, director.

200 Vivisectionist Students Loose Mice On Antis

London, June 21 (AP)—Buckets of water, strong smelling chemicals, and live mice were the answer of 200 London students last night to anti-vivisectionist arguments being propounded at a meeting at Caxton Hall, Westminster.

There were several lively scuffles. Women of the audience beat some of the students with their umbrellas.

Dr. Hadwen, the chairman, was prevented from speaking by the disturbers who finally were quelled by the police, many of them suffering minor injuries.

NEWSBOY AIDS FOUR LOST LADS

Four little boys searching for their homes, from which they had skipped to take a dip in the frog pond on Boston Common the other afternoon, ran up to a newsboy near the State House sobbing that they wanted to go home.

They didn't know where they lived and they said that they were hungry.

The newsboy brought them to the Harry E. Burroughs Newsboys Foundation, told his story to the executive secretary and asked if he would take care of them.

While they were eating one little fellow became quite talkative. He said his name was Danny and that he lived on Phillips st. A newsboy was sent to Phillips st. with them and tried to locate their homes. Danny found his home and was happy to get there. One of the others lived on the same street, one on Grove st. and one on Anderson st. They were Danny Laruso, 4 years old; Ernest Singer, 3½ years old (though he said he thought he was 15 years old), Willie Heituer, 5 years old, and Morris Bresloff, 4 years old.

When the newsboy got ready to take them home they expressed their appreciation for the good time, but wanted to get home as soon as possible.

Kills Buffalo on An Airplane Hunt

Ogden, Utah, June 21 (AP)—Successful airplane Buffalo hunting expedition terminated with the landing here of a Union Pacific Airways, Inc., plane with the carcass of a buffalo shot on Antelope Island in the Great Salt Lake. The expedition, organized by Ernest Ford, well known sportsman, flew from Ogden to the island, spotted the herd and landed, after which Ford succeeded in bringing down one of the animals.

HEAT KILLS MALDEN WOMAN

Prostrated by the heat during the past few days, Miss Mary Kelleher, 55, of 19 Gale st., Malden, dropped dead in her home and was found by her niece, Miss Catherine Kelleher. Dr. John McCarthy said death was due to the heat. She was the aunt of Patrolman William J. Kelleher.

Bay State Youths Head Norwich Cadets

Northfield, Vt., June 21—Jacob W. Juckett of Mittineague, Mass., a junior, will hold highest rank in the Cadet Corps of Norwich University next fall, it was announced. He will be major cadet captain. Next to him in rank will be James Hoach, Dorchester, Mass.; Robert Barney, Winthrop, Mass.; Paul Andrews, Arlington, Mass., and Alexander Bellale, Fall River, Mass.

Four of next year's juniors who will hold high rank in their class as first sergeants are John Whitesides, Lowell, Mass.; William McAllister, Manchester, N. H.; Kenneth Thomas, Berlin, N. H., and Kendrick Day, Rutland.

Plan Survey for East Boston Tunnel

Armed with a $50,000 appropriation for the purpose, the three commissioners of the Boston transit department and their staff will shortly commence a study preliminary to the cutting of a $10,000,000 vehicular tunnel under the harbor waters, connecting the mainland with Noddle Island.

Official decision on location of portals at either wing of the tunnel, and the course of the tunnel will be based on this survey. The War Department at Washington must finally approve plans for the enterprise before it can be undertaken.

The Curious Quizzer

Roxbury Folk Answer His Daily Question and Pose for Pictures.

THE QUESTION

Do you think a student who marries should be allowed to return to school?

MISS ELLA C. FAULKNER, Cedar st.—Boys and girls of school age should be thinking of their studies and not of marriage. When they run away and get married somewhere in secret they know they have done wrong. When their secret is discovered by the school authorities the only proper procedure is to expel them and not allow the other children to be given to understand that school instructors sanction such actions.

MISS JEAN WHITE, Cedar st.—If it is learned that a student has married while a member of a class in school he or she should be reprimanded, perhaps, but should be allowed to finish the education. Without an education it is very difficult for young people to obtain positions. The heads of school departments should not prevent married students from continuing their studies before they are prepared to enter the business life for which the school is preparing them.

JOSEPH PARKER KANE, Harrison ave.—Getting married when in school always involves students in trouble. If a girl or boy gets married when going to a school neither should be allowed to continue. If it's a boy who gets married when a student he should leave school and go right to work. If it is a schoolgirl she should leave and devote her time to keeping her home in order. I agree with school superintendents who rule that young married students should be summarily dismissed.

* * *

JAMES E. FALLON, Putnam pl.—Sweethearts who get married while attending school should not be deprived of an education. To expel a girl or a boy from school takes away their best chance to learn the necessary methods of earning a livelihood. Marriage should not constitute a bar to learning. Let the boy or the girl who marries while in school [illegible] education and I am sure that their families will support them until they start out for themselves.

Sanford Man Held in New Bedford Theft

Sanford, Me., June 21—Telesphore St. Amand, a resident of this town for the past eight months, was taken to New Bedford, Mass., by police officers of that city.

St. Amand, who has been employed at the Murray garage, was arrested by Chief of Police Arthur Tobey, charged with the larceny of a sum of money from a New Bedford man.

$100,000 FIRE IN N.H. FACTORY

West Ossipee, N. H., June 21—A $100,000 fire early today wiped out two buildings that contained the storehouse, office and machine shop of the Snowmobile Co.

James Black of Conway, night watchman, discovered the flames, and apparatus was summoned from Tamworth, Conway, Center Ossipee, Madison and Wolfeboro, but the firemen could only protect surrounding property. The cause was not determined.

Bostonians Sail on Majestic Today

The White Star liner Majestic, sailing from New York today for Cherbourg and Southampton, will carry 2250 passengers.

Among passengers will be Eliot Wadsworth, former assistant secretary of the treasury; going over on a governmental mission, and Mrs. Wadsworth; Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra; Miss Genevieve Cummings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland N. Cummings of Malden, and Miss Claire Sargent, daughter of the Malden city engineer, going abroad on an extended tour; Mr. and Mrs. [illegible]; the Misses Marion A. Charlotte and Eleanor Dabney; Mrs. John Lowell and Mrs. Joseph B. Townsend of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. F. W. C. Foster and Miss Betty Foster of Brookline.

Autoists! New Right of Way Law in Effect Today

The A. L. A. calls to the attention of motorists operating in Massachusetts that the new right of way law becomes effective today. Under the new law when two vehicles approach an intersecting way the one which enters the intersection first is entitled to the right of way. If the two vehicles reach the intersection at approximately the same instant, the one on the right is entitled to the right of way.

The A. L. A. urges all motorists to approach the intersections with great caution and not to insist upon the right of way, for, in cases of accident, owing to the shifting rights conferred by the law, it is very probable that both parties will be found at fault.

Dorchester Couple to Altar Tomorrow

Miss Frances Mary Callahan of 1113 Washington st., Dorchester, is to become the bride of George F. Potter, also of Dorchester, at St. Gregory's Church tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

The Rev. Father Dolan of St. Gregory's will be celebrant of the nuptial mass and the bride will be attended by her sister, Miss Kathleen Callahan. Lester Ryan will be best man. Miss Callahan, who is a graduate of the Sacred Heart Academy, belongs to a prominent Dorchester family. Her maternal grandfather, the late James Costello, was one of the leading citizens of Dorchester.

SHOE UNION ORDERS DEFIED

Police dispersed 15 strike pickets today in front of the Pilgrim Shoe Company plant, K st., South Boston, after the strikers had paraded for a short time in defiance of an injunction.

When the pickets appeared on the scene police of station 12 were notified and five officers responded. They kept the strikers on the move for a while and then ordered them away from the vicinity of the factory.

Cutters went back to work at the Pilgrim factory today and lasters are to start tomorrow, it was announced. Union heads have ordered the employes to return to their benches and termed those who refused "outlaws."

Bowdoin Grad Flies to Reunion

Brunswick, Me., June 21—For the first time in the history of Bowdoin College, an alumnus used an airplane to attend a reunion of his class.

Edward R. Godfrey of Bangor flew to Brunswick, and return, in order to be present at the 30th reunion of his class.

THE PRINCE OF WALES' BRIDE. Everyone is talking about her or speculating as to who she will be. The English point of view is interestingly set forth by Lady Decies in an interview published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser next Sunday, June 23.

MISS JOSEPHINE ROTCH WEDS IN OLD COLONIAL CHURCH TODAY

Society Flocks to Old Lyme, Ct., for Her Marriage to Albert S. Bigelow

TRADITION DEAR TO THE HEART OF EVERY BRIDE, IS served today when Miss Josephine Rotch murmurs her marriage vows to Albert S. Bigelow in the same old Colonial Congregational Church at Old Lyme, Ct., where her grandmother became a bride. And for her nuptials the wealth and fashion of half a dozen cities gathers in that simple white church to do honor to the lovely dark-haired debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch of Commonwealth ave. It is a very select assembly indeed, drawn from the cream of society in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston, Brookline and Lyme, with 17 ushers seating each with the ceremony due exalted rank and position.

ATTENDED BY 10 DAUGHTERS OF EQUALLY IMPORTANT social station, the bride, in creamy gown, made in simple mode, becomes Mrs. Bigelow at high noon, the Rev. Dr. Williams A. Brown of New York and the Rev. W. D. Hoag of Lyme officiating. Miss Lydia Rotch, a sister of the bride, occupies the place of honor with Mrs. Robert F. Downs (Mabel McIlvaine) of Philadelphia in the processional. Miss Gladys Bigelow, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Alice Graves and Miss Judith Kelly of Boston, Miss Margaret Barker and Miss Mary Sharretts Hamman of Baltimore, Miss Elizabeth Houck of Westport, Ct., and Miss Margaret Lee Burgess, Miss Constance Sullivan, Miss Sally Thacher and Miss Clarissa Wardwell of New York are the bridesmaids.

HUGH W. BIGELOW, OF Brookline, attends his brother as best man, and James Roosevelt, son of Governor Franklin Roosevelt of New York, is one of the large usher squad. The others are Richard Covel and Richard Warren of Brookline, Morris Brownell of New Bedford, John Tudor of Cambridge, Robert A. Leeson of Boston, Nathaniel Clifford of Milton, William J. Iselin of Mt. Kisco, N. Y., Williams L. Elkins of Elkins Park, Pa., Nicholas Ludington of Ardmore, Pa., Owen L. Winston of Gladstone, N. J., George S. Tiffany of St. Louis, Carter Carnegie, Orton P. Jackson, Arthur M. McGeoch, Edward de S. Melcher and Joseph W. Outerbridge of New York.

LOOKING OUT FROM HER wonderful heirloom veil of rare old lace and tulle, the bride beholds scores of Boston's society favorites who motored over for the wedding. Among them are the Henry Parkinsons of [illegible] st., Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Bigelow of Dudley st., Brookline, parents of the bridegroom and Miss Mary Williams, daughter of the late Moses Williams who was the bridegroom's grandfather.

SOCIETY THOROUGHLY enjoys every opportunity for gathering congenial spirits for sports events, and the Harvard-Yale boat classic today is the background for many brilliant parties in New London. Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Morss have a large party aboard their palatial yacht, the Paladin, anchored in the Thames for the event. Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Herrick also are hosts to a large party including Mr. and Mrs. George S. Mumford Jr. of Milton, on their yacht. And on the Aztec Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Burrage have a party. The Ronald T. Lymans of Beacon st. have a group of important guests at the Hotel Griswold where also A. H. B. Peabody of Cambridge is the genial host for Harvard [illegible]. Henry C. Clark of Cambridge, general secretary of the Harvard Alumni Association and Mrs. Clark have a large party of guests, also.

ONE HAS ONLY TO SCAN the weekly sailing lists to discover that Boston society is addicted, heart, soul and pocketbook, to journeyings abroad. Tomorrow Miss Margaret Lang, a bud of the 1929-30 crop, embarks from New York abroad the Roma with her mother, Mrs. Malcolm Lang of Bay State rd., bound for Italy. These travelers will be the guests of Mrs. William G. Mixter in her Florence villa during a two-month stay abroad. Miss Betsy Cushing, fiancee of James Roosevelt, also sails tomorrow. Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth leave their beautiful Villa LaTomia at Marblehead Neck to sail away for foreign travel this evening.

ECHOES OF A DELIGHTFUL luncheon given for the board of governors of the Junior League recently at Brookfield, the beautiful country home of Miss Betty Moulton, in Hamilton, apprised many of this popular young woman's friends of her return from travels abroad with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Moulton of Beacon st. Eighteen guests had a delightful time at Brookfield and were taken later in the afternoon to Pride's Crossing to the home of Mrs. Lyon Weyburn for tea.

Women Leaders Will Address Students

THE nation's clubwomen are to have a tremendously important part in the program this year of the Chautauqua Institution, New York, oldest summer school in the United States.

Under the auspices of the Chautauqua Woman's Club sessions sponsored by their membership will open July 1, with program speakers taken from the General Federation of Woman's Clubs.

In fact, the Who's Who of the first week of the Chautauqua Club meetings look like a page from the imposing directory of the General Federation, so numerous are the names of club leaders of the country.

Of this group, Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker, a former president of the General Federation, is president.

They have taken as their general theme for the opening week "Training for Leadership and World Conditions."

The Chautauqua Woman's Club is a great cosmopolitan body of over 1100 members, holding meetings four days a week for six weeks in the Hall of Philosophy of this remarkable institution, which, by the side of Lake Chautauqua, attracts 3000 students from everywhere annually.

Mrs. P. V. Pennypacker

"Spiritual Basis of Leadership" is the subject of a lecture to be given by Mrs. John F. Sippel, General Federation president, and will be given on the second day.

Mrs. W. R. Alvord, former president of the Michigan Federation of Women's Clubs, former chairman of the department of citizenship of the General Federation and at present its chairman of press and publicity, is to be one of the speakers.

The first vice-president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Ambrose N. Diehl, who is chairman of the General Federation's motion picture committee, is to contribute to the Chautauqua program.

Others who will participate in the message giving program include Mrs. John A. Frick, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Ben Hooper, chairman of the department of international relations of the General Federation; Miss Emily Louise Plumley, president of the Connecticut Federation and president of the president's council of the General Federation; Mrs. William H. Purdy, past president of the New York State Federation; Mrs. Charles J. Reeder, New York State Federation president.

Dr. Carrie Chapman Catt, America's famous woman suffragist, is to speak at the opening session.

Mrs. Sippel will talk on "Courage, Poise, Tact, Love of Humanity" later in the week. "Why a Leader Needs Publicity Sense. How May She Acquire It?" has been chosen by Mrs. Alvord as the theme of her discourse.

WOMEN'S REPUBLICAN CLUB OF MALDEN

Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner will attend the picnic of the Malden club, at Pine Banks Log Cabin, North Main st., Malden, on June 24. It is to be a basket lunch picnic.

Sen. Angier T. Goodwin of Melrose is to bring greetings to the gathering. Also Mrs. Alice B. Harrington, assistant to the state ornithologist, who will briefly talk on "Bird Friends of the Shore and Forest."

The speakers are to be introduced by the president, Mrs. Emma Fall Schofield. Mrs. Myra F. Thurman is to be the soloist and song leader.

GENERAL FEDERATION

No one before has warned American girls of pitfalls that await them unchaperoned in Paris.

Whether or not such dangers have provocated other women to venture publicly of the hazards, we don't know, but Mrs. Charles M. Dickenson, a past president of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs, recently declared herself in no uncertain words and issued a warning to American girls contemplating going to Paris to study.

Mrs. Dickenson, who has been spending some time in Paris, was one of the speakers at a meeting of the American Woman's Club of Paris.

During her stay in the French capital she said.

"Paris has proved a tragedy for many young American girls who arrived here unprotected. Every young American girl nowadays who believes she has artistic talent feels she must come to Paris to develop it. When she arrives she very often has no friend to look after her and she has made no arrangements for a suitable place to live with a respectable family.

American parents do not seem to realize the danger when they allow their young daughters to come to Paris unchaperoned. When I return to America I shall take advantage of every opportunity when speaking in public to mention this question."

DETROIT FEDERATION

The first Woman's International Exposition in Detroit will be held in Convention Hall, October 14 to 19 under the auspices of the Detroit Federation of Women's Clubs.

The proceeds are to be used for the endowment fund of the Detroit Federation, whose 34 years of unselfish civic and philanthropic service to the city is an enviable record.

Surge Carries Braves Into Sixth Place

HAVE WON 5 OF LAST 6 GAMES

By NICK FLATLEY

THE TOP of the second division is only a game and a half away from the Braves. They have hurdled the Dodgers and are parked this blithe June day in sixth place. The Phillies re just ahead, and they come along for a series, after the more or less shattered Robins go away from here.

The Tribe seems to have started a real winning streak. The Wigwam athletes have collected five out of their last six, and have won three in a row. They play the Robins again this afternoon, and that club has not won a game in Boston this year

Uncle Wilbert Robinson, usually a jovial soul is now a confirmed pessimist and has resigned himself, though he won't admit it, to the cellar. Injuries to his regulars, and internal troubles in official circles have ruined the ball club.

AL WESTON, great Boston College athlete is likely to make his large league debut very shortly He has agreed to terms with the Braves, but can't sign officially unless some present member of the tribe gets the air. Chances are that one of the pitchers will be sent away, so that Al can be looked over.

Al will have no chance to break into the fielding part of the pastime yet, but he will appear as a pinch hitter. He made his collegiate baseball name by smacking out home runs

Which reminds us that Sheriff [illegible] of Providence is paging himself another trial. The husky young man has clipped 19 homers Providence, and that rates him [illegible] more shot. He didn't look to much of a fielder when he was [illegible] but the boys say he has improved mightily And his hitting attracted the attention of [illegible] from all corners

RED BARRON, the husky youth from Georgia Tech, has made fine impression. He fields well and confidently, has a good arm and looks like a hitter. He has been up against Watson Clark, a real left hander in two games, and has belted the ball hard He smacked two right on the nose Thursday

One almost tore Clark's hands off and went for a hit. The other whizzed right at the third baseman. Red who played for a season with Providence before he retired to coach Georgia Tech, has none of the nervousness that most athletes are handicapped with by breaking in. His high pressure collegiate career undoubtedly cured him of buck fever

Red looks like a useful citizen to have around when left handers are working. What he may do with the right hand chuckers remains to be seen. He brings some real speed to the club, which needs the same badly.

JUDGE FUCHS is beginning to think he has a pitching staff Three of his chuckers have gone through complete games without weakening Nothing like that has happened since the first couple of weeks of the season

The Judge has Brandt and Cantwell of his regulars left to shoot against the Robins, who play double-header tomorrow, and probably will try out Cooney or Hearn in the third game

Southpaws take the edge off the Robin clubbing power. Herman and Henrick are mighty sluggers against the regular sort of pitching, but they do not do so well when the offside boys are working

THE PHILLIES, who have been poison to the Tribe, come here Sunday for the first Sabbath double bill The Quaker sluggers seem to have the same edge on the Braves that the latter hold on Brooklyn But improved pitching, and the Braves certainly seem to have that, may change the story If the boys can get two out of the remaining three with the Robins they should be in the properly chesty mood to flatten the Phils

Golf Bug Bites Russia

Moscow, June 21 (INS)—The golf bug has at last bitten Soviet Russia.

Plans for the first course in the whole country are being made here by several athletic clubs, with the assistance of a number of foreign residents.

The course will be of nine holes on an acreage large enough to allow for extension to 18 holes. Not long ago a Soviet official decried golf and tennis, stating that white flannels and plus-fours were emblems of decadent aristocracy.

Duffy Lewis Quits Portland Job

By CHARLES HOFFMAN

GEORGE "DUFFY" LEWIS, manager of the Portland team and former Red Sox outfielder, has resigned on account of ill health. Lewis has held down his present berth for the past two and one half years. He recommended [illegible], the captain and third baseman, as his successor, and [illegible] was named for the rest of the year While at Portland Lewis won a second-half pennant and was close to the top a year ago. This year the club is five games behind in the [illegible] race

Lewis was with the Red Sox from 1910 to 1917, in the Navy in 1918, with the Yankees in 1919 and 1920, and with Washington in 1921

The next four years he was part owner and manager of the Salt Lake City club in the Pacific Coast League, and then the Mobile, Ala., team of the Southern Association

LYNN has won 11 games out of the last 13 and looks to be well on the way to another pennant.

The Nashua team did not fare well in their first home game, being slaughtered by the fast-traveling New Bedford team 16 to 2

Duke Sedgwick, the Portland ace, lost his second game of the season at the hands of the Lewiston team

Parker Twombly, who twirled for Lynn last season, broke into the Portland lineup, but after pitching good ball for six innings was forced out of the game when a hard hit ball from Doc Doherty's bat hit him on the head

ART PARISIEN, former Notre Dame star, is one of the fastest men on the bases in any league In the game against Portland the Lewiston flash beat out three hits to the infield.

Monczewicz, former Boston College and recently let out by Pittsfield, signed up with Portland and is playing shortstop.

Ray Saunders, league leading batter, continues to sock the pill in every game Although his team lost the game to Lewiston Saunders poled out three hits including a double Bill Whaley, Lynn outfielder, is proving [illegible]. When [illegible] was hurt Bill stepped in at second base and is playing a bangup game.

MR. BOSTON by JACK CONWAY

"THIS Gorilla Jones isn't so tough that he cannot be beaten," writes Joe Jacobs from Lakehurst, N. J., where he is directing the training of Max Schmeling for his 15-round bout with Paulino at the Milk Fund show on next Thursday night in New York

"I have Jack McVey battling Jones for Eddie Mack at Braves Field on next Monday night," went on Joe "McVey is one of the best middleweights in the world You saw him the night he stopped Arthur Flynn at the Boston Garden

"Jones will not find McVey an easy mark Jack can shoot punches with each hand He was bitten by a fox when a youngster and he doesn't permit his jaw to linger in the way of right hand punches

"I may not be able to make the trip to Boston for the Jones-McVey mill on account of Schmeling battling Paulino, but if I don't Billy McCarney will be on the job. He'll show McVey how to lick Jones and also pick up the sugar after the match

"I might mention that Schmeling will plaster Paulino all over the Yankee Stadium. Everybody now knows he will crash through with a knockout victory."

"A breezy youth is Jacobs," chirped Mr. Boston as he finished reading the letter. "Just now Jacobs is very much in the money with Schmeling, Glick, Routis and McVey in his fistic stable

PAUL BOWSER called Mr. Boston on the telephone to inform him that Gus Sonnenberg and Strangler Lewis are ready to get down to serious training for their world's heavyweight championship mat battle which will be staged at Fenway Park on July 9.

"Everybody tells me I am suffering from heat because I have guaranteed Sonny $75,000 and Lewis $25,000 for the championship mill. The show figures to cost me $125,000 when I include rent and the cost of the prelims and promotion. I feel that Sonny and Lewis will draw $150,000 at the least, and that the gate may hit $200,000

"When these two big fellows clashed at the Boston Garden last January the show drew $79,000. The affair was a sellout a week in advance. It would have gone $150,000 if I had sufficient seating capacity.

"Sonnenberg and Lewis are the outstanding attractions in the mat game. This bout is particularly hot just now on account of Billy Sandow's two months' publicity campaign, which was aimed at Dynamite. He forced Gus to call off his barnstorming tour and agree to a defense of his title."

MR. BOSTON told the gang that Sheldon H. Fairbanks and Tack Hardwick of the Boston Garden now use the airplane route when called to New York on business This is the only time when either Tack or Sheldon go into the air.

"I HAVE not noticed any wild rush on the part of Jimmy Londos, Hans Steinke and a few other so-called wrestling threats to step in with Strangler Lewis at his training camp at Revere" said Mr. Boston "Lewis has offered all of the grapplers an opportunity to display their favorite holds and has not put the bars up on anybody

"STEINKE, the pet of the New York Commission, looked like a stand out challenger until Billy Sandow tipped the world that the German had been beaten by Marin Plestina in 19 minutes. Plestina in turn was tipped over by Sonny."

Hertz to Promote Gold Cup Race

London, June 21 (INS)—Through the Evening Standard, John D Hertz of Chicago today announced his plans for the promotion of an international gold cup race at Arlington Park, Chicago, to be run annually with stakes of $100,000

His purpose is to encourage the owners of the best foreign racers to visit America and compete for the international cup. Hertz is chairman of the Arlington track

He stated that if the owners of the best French and English horses would agree to compete in Chicago next year, his wife would keep Reigh Count, winner of the 1928 Kentucky Derby, who ran second in the Ascot gold cup race yesterday, in training until then instead of retiring him to the stud immediately big event lengthened to three to one on the wave of Blue enthusiasm.

Yale Victor in Freshman and Varsity Crew Races

Upstream on the picturesque Thames, in lanes flanked by scores of colorfully bedecked yachts, the ancient rivals renewed their three quarter-century old feud this morning under excellent weather conditions.

The thousands looking on from boats, shore and observation trains got their principal thrill out of the battle between the freshman eights. From start to finish the opening event was an exciting affair, with what looked like a Harvard victory a half mile from the finish, turned suddenly into a smashing triumph for the Eli youngsters.

HARVARD GETS THE JUMP

The Harvard freshmen got the jump at the getaway, spurted out into a quarter length in the lead and held a varying margin for the first half of the race. Yale's cubs always within striking distance, challenged at the three-quarter-mile mark and again at the mile as the crews swept past the sombre blue of the New London submarine base.

The Elis actually got out in front at this point, but in less than a furlong they had lost their lead as Harvard spurted again, gaining a full half length as the crews went past the mile and a half [illegible].

YALE DASH WINS

Sirens shrieked from Crimson beflagged craft. Yale appeared beaten, but not for long. Lifting their stroke up to the astonishing pace of about 40-to-the-minute, the Elis, stroked by R. S. Auchincloss of New York city, put on a rally that quickly cut down the Crimson advantage.

A quarter of a mile from the finish they were prow and prow together, but in the closing dash Yale's stroke never faltered. The Eli youngsters gained steadily and swept across the finish line three quarters of a boat length to the good.

Afterward the race officials reported that Harvard lost valuable distance and possibly cost itself a chance for victory by faulty steering in the first half-mile of the contest.

CRIMSON CREW WANDERS

Although the Crimson freshmen were in front over this part of the route, it was figured they lost at least a length and possibly more by wandering from their lane. It was said they had to veer in sharply to pass through the markers at [illegible] mile.

The official times were:

Yale 11:07

Harvard 11:09 3-5

The junior varsity was all Yale. The Elis got the jump at the start, had a full length advantage at the half way mark, and rowed away from the Crimson "Jayvees" easily to win by fully four lengths.

HARVARD SLUGGISH

Harvard's boatload seemed sluggish all the way, while the Eli craft, paced by W. R. Tappen, of Pleasantville, N. Y., last year's varsity stroke, never was in danger of being headed. It wasn't necessary but the Blue put on a finishing spurt, just the same, to make it more decisive.

The official time: Yale 11:00; Harvard 11:12 1-5.

Yale's double victory repeated the Blue's sweep of the morning events in 1923-24-25-27-28. This covers the period of Head Coach Ed Leader's regime at New Haven during which Harvard's only moments of preliminary glory came in 1926. The Crimson won both early races that year.

OFFICIAL TIME

FRESHMAN RACE

Distance	Yale	Harvard
Half mile	[illegible]	[illegible]
One mile	5:30 [illegible]	5:29
Mile and one half	8:21 2-5	8:19 3-5
Two miles	11:07	11:09

SECOND VARSITY RACE

Distance	Yale	Harvard
Half mile	2:45 2-5	2:41 [illegible]
One mile	5:25 4-5	5:27 3-5
Mile and one half	8:13 2-5	8:21 3-5
Two miles	11:00	11:12 4-5

BOTH camps are overflowing with former distinguished oarsmen. Harvard's include Robert F. Herrick, Wm. Lathrop Ames, Frank Sullivan, A. H. Hobson, Jr.; F. L. Higginson, Dudley Clark, father of the Harvard captain, and W. J. Bingham, director of athletics.

Yale's guests include James Gamble Rogers, James Otis Rodgers, John M. Goetchius, Bayne Denegre, Gen. W. W. Siddy, Ratcliffe Romeyn, Redmond Cross, Charles Storrs, Richard Storrs and Louis Hull.

Observation trains on both sides of the Thames will follow all of today's races. The ticket supply for the varsity event was long since exhausted. The largest display of yachts ever anchored in the Thames for its occupants to see a boat race, today filled the spacious harbor including 40 boats of the American Yacht Club, which started its annual race to the West Indies from Rye, N. Y., and came to this city on its first day's cruise this morning.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

Luck Big Factor in Open Golf Play

By JOHNNY FARRELL

ALL the elements known to golf as a scientific game will enter [illegible] coming national open championship at the Winged [illegible] Club at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Luck always plays a prominent part in these open championships but [illegible] role is to be great [illegible] if I am any judge of [illegible]

[illegible] Winged Foot links are very [illegible] I doubt whether there is a sterner test in the whole country [illegible] wouldn't be surprised if the [illegible] mounted as high as [illegible]

[illegible] much depends on the weather. If the days are clear and hot, the boys may do fairly well. [illegible] is wet and the links are [illegible] by the rain, watch out [illegible] signals.

[illegible] small Winged Foot greens are going to play mischief with most of us. The carpets are not only small but billowy in their construction.

THE feature of the Winged Foot greens are their uniformity. They have been patterned rather alike for both long and short shots. Now a green that can be reached with a niblick, or mashie-niblick, or spade-mashie should be smaller than those where the approach is a No. 2 iron or a spoon. It has been the custom to give the golfer a fairly large target to shoot at with the longer clubs. But Winged Foot has not followed this custom. Not only are its greens small but they are tightly and [illegible] trapped.

Sheer skill therefore is not the golfer's only need at this tough layout. He must hope for fortune's favor.

BEST SCHOOL PLAYERS HARD TO PICK

By DICK McSWEENEY

The Boston Evening American presents a team of great hitting power and superior fielding as its All-Scholastic selection for 1929.

For outfielders, a better trio than that composed of William Ober, Medford, Wilfred Burke, Revere and Arthur Graham, Somerville would be hard to find.

Billy Ober has been playing regularly in the Medford outfield for the past two years and, though not flashy, his work has been characterized by timely hitting and clever fielding.

He is a modest player who lets the other fellow do the bragging and the fact that he lacks color has prevented his work from receiving the notice it has deserved.

Wilfred Burke of Rindge Tech has been selected as an All-Scholastic outfielder because of his terrific hitting and consistent performances in the Rindge outfield. Burke is a quiet type of youth who lets his actions speak for him.

Rindge Tech did not have as successful a season, but there was no complaining by Burke. He went out, played ball regardless.

GRAHAM GOOD

Arthur Graham, Somerville outfielder, has found playing the national game one of his strong points. He hit the ball fiercely for the Red and Blue this past season and his work in the outfield was brilliant.

Sam Clayman of Lynn English is nearly the ideal first baseman. Sam covers his territory as it should be covered and his batting has been healthy.

Tom Curran, B. C. high, ranks far and away the best second baseman in and around Greater Boston. His fielding was sure and steady. His batting average of .353 speaks for itself.

Picking the shortstop of the Boston Evening American All-Scholastic team was a fairly easy task. Billy Marshall of Dorchester wins the award as easily as Charlie Paddock might outdistance a group of fat men.

Marshall is a ball player who has that mysterious baseball "it" called "class."

KATZ CAPABLE

Abe Katz of Cambridge Latin is the third baseman. He is chosen because of his consistency in play. His fielding overshadows that of any other third sacker in these parts.

Gennaro Pagluica, Everett, is the American's choice as catcher. He is a colorful player. Though impulsive, he is always on the job. At one time this season, Pagluica led his club and all other clubs for that matter, with the batting average of .519.

Vito "Lefty" Tamulis, Boston English ace, is the choice for pitcher. Lefty hurled efficiently for the Blue and Blue nine and had a good season at bat. As he is only a sophomore in high school, better things may be expected of him in years to come, but in the light of his season's work, it is difficult to see how he can improve much.

WARD VERSATILE

Utility men come in handy on any team. Good ones are scarce, but Bob Ward of Everett as infield reserve and Ernest Carleton of Lynn English as outfield reserve fill the bill excellently. Both are fine hitters and accurate fielders.

The second team is made up of boys whose play deserves more than honorary mention but who could not make the grade as first team material.

In the outfield we have Duffy of B. C. high, a youth who closed his high school career after a brilliant season; Francis Escott of Somerville, capable fielder and batter, and Phil Andres of Newton, colorful slugger and fielder of the Suburban League champions.

Desmond of Commerce, classy fielder, gets the first base job; Normile of Rindge satisfies at second, Dexter of Brookline fits in nicely at shortfield, and Bucky Warren of Boston Latin pleases at third.

Ed McCarthy of Medford high wins the second team backstop berth with Buck Weafer of Woburn pitching.

Honorable mention goes to the following players:

Outfield: Learmonth of Lawrence, Marston of Stoneham, Abbott of Arlington, Higgins of Wentworth Institute, Santarpio of East Boston, and Catarius of Boston Commerce.

Infield: Albiani of Lawrence Academy, Sullivan of Cambridge Latin, Crowley of Boston English, Loud of Rindge Tech, McDonough of Woburn, and Shortall of Wentworth Institute.

Catchers: Luppi of Somerville, Denucci of Watertown, Le Presti of Arlington, Gumoski of Boston Trade, Harvey of B. C. High, and Doloff of Melrose.

Pitchers: De Mille of Wentworth Institute, McFagden of Cambridge Latin, McLain of Boston English, Polhemus of Lynn English, Routhaska of Lynn Classical, McConiskey of Lawrence, Smith of Watertown, Millikan of Lawrence Academy, Coombs of Exeter, Beaman of Malden, J. Concannon of Dorchester, Hall of Somerville, Nicholas of Newton, Theroux of Stoneham and Brown of Hingham.

Zeramby Exhibits Plenty of Class Against Fuller

AHEAD AT TIME OF FOUL

By JACK CONWAY

JAKE ZERAMBY looked like one of the ring masters of a generation ago as he won from Sammy Fuller on a foul in three rounds at an Arena Club show at Fenway Park.

Jack Conway

Zeramby, a 19-year-old Jewish boy, was well out in front when Fuller delivered the low blow which caused Referee Jimmy Walsh to disqualify him. It was later announced that the Boxing Commission had ordered the Arena Club not to pay Fuller. Before the bout started the boxers were warned that if there was a foul the guilty party would not be paid.

If the bout had gone the distance there is no doubt but that Zeramby would have won by a wide margin.

Zeramby was removed to his home in Lynn after the contest. He is today under treatment of a physician for injuries caused by the low punch, and will not be able to go through with his bout with Sammy Dorfman at the Boston Garden next Monday night. This match will be staged as soon as Zeramby gets back into action.

ZERAMBY weighed in at 130 pounds, while Fuller was at 126½ pounds.

Fuller came out of his corner fighting in the first round. He let drive with a right hand sock, but Zeramby pulled away. Jake stepped in and popped Sammy with a couple of right hand jabs and then whizzed his left to the body.

Sammy gritted his teeth and let both hands fly for the head, but he could not find the elusive Zeramby.

Fuller countered with a left hook to the head, but was turned half way around by a jarring right hook to the chin. Zeramby then stepped to close quarters and barraged with left and right hand socks to the body. It was Jake's round.

Fuller went out to win by a knockout in the second frame, but Zeramby kept him missing. Jake's right hand was continually in Fuller's face, while the Lynn boy shot some heavy left hooks to the head and body. The second round was Zeramby's by a wide margin.

Zeramby resumed his right-hand attack as the third round opened. Fuller missed several heavy punches, then shot a low blow which sent Zeramby to the can as in a heap. Referee Jimmy Walsh immediately declared Zeramby a winner on a foul. It was necessary for Jake's seconds to carry him to his corner and to later assist him from the ring.

Boxing Commissioner Eugene Buckley, who was at the ringside, ruled that Fuller should not receive any compensation, on account of the warning in regard to fouls which was given to the boxers before the contest started.

It was the first time Fuller has fouled his opponent during his seven years in the boxing game.

FRANKIE MOORE of Medford was awarded the decision over Hy Diamond of the West End in the 10-round semi-final, which went on after the main event. It was one of the best featherweights contests ever staged in Boston. The crowd was divided as to the merits of the decision. Some of the fans figured Moore won, while others were of the opinion that Diamond had the margin. It would make a good return match.

Moore was aggressive at all times and did some heavy execution when at close quarters. Diamond, on the other hand, sparkled at long range boxing, while he landed the cleaner blows.

FREDDY O'CONNOR of South Boston showed good form when he scored a technical knockout over Frankie Mason of the North End in two heats.

Frankie O'Day of the South End won from Eddie Thomas of Roxbury in four rounds, Leslie Baker of Watertown stopped Jimmy Britt of Cambridge in a round, Joe Mack of Manchester, N. H., outscored George Flate of Dorchester in four frames, George Russo of Boston disposed of Sam Olsen of Charlestown in four frames, while Nick Madona of Lexington flattened Joe Conley of Dorchester in four heats.

A crowd of 9000 fans paid $7500 to see the show.

Johnson-Grim Bout Was Notable

For many years "Tad" T. A. Dorgan, one of the greatest cartoonists and sporting authorities that ever lived, covered the "fight" game. Shortly before his death "Tad" wrote and illustrated a series of stories describing in his own inimitable style those ring battles which for thrills and [illegible] were stamped indelibly in his mind. These reminiscences deal not only with fights [illegible] of state, but with the [illegible] staged in private and at the smaller clubs. This story is one of the stories.

By TAD

A MEMORABLE fight of about 20 years ago was that between Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion of the world, and Joe Grim, the "iron man," of Philadelphia.

Johnson pummeled Grim for six rounds, knocking him down 18 times, but could not land the knockout wallop. In the last round Grim was down for the count of eight when the bell clanged ending the battle. The fight was held at the National A. C., Philadelphia, on July 24, 1905.

Grim, the sturdy Italian, had faced the greatest men in the world without being counted out. When he met Johnson it looked as though he had met his Waterloo. He was down for the tenth time in the sixth round, and lay there writhing in pain, hundreds around the ring hatless and coatless, yelling like mad, his seconds running around throwing water and begging him to get up. The referee counted eight just as the bell sounded and saved Grim from what looked to be certain defeat. He stayed the limit with the giant black man, but every speck of gameness was brought into play to land him on his feet.

It was a sight that one seldom sees and one that will linger long in the memory of those present. Grim had fought gamely for five rounds; he took terrific lefts on the body, nose and mouth without flinching, and went to his corner round after round looking more like a hamburger steak than a human being. He came up smiling for the sixth, and as he shook hands with his powerful opponent said: "Joe Grim is still here, and you can't put him out."

Big Johnson, looming up like a mountain of ebony, smiled, but back of the smile was a desire to get action out of the Italian wonder. As they squared off the big black giant rushed and drove a crushing right on Grim's jaw. Joe's head rolled back, he went down slowly and then rolled over on his back. The crowd howled and howled as Referee McGuigan counted, but Grim gamely arose, only to be crushed again. Nine different times he had gone to the floor in that round from the piledriving smashes of the giant negro, and as he rolled over from the last one every man in the house thought that his time had come. Grim had been beaten almost to a pulp in this round, and as he stopped the last uppercut on his jaw and rolled over on his back without the slightest sign of life it did really look as though he was out for good.

HE fell over on his back, his head almost out of the ring and there he lay, the referee getting closer to the fatal ten and the excitement getting wilder and wilder just as the gong came to his rescue. Four seconds carried the disabled fighter to his corner, where he was worked on until he came to, and then he got up smiling, looked for Johnson and shook hands with him. Johnson's eyes were sticking out and he was as rattled as any man in the house, seeing how near he had come to putting the Iron Italian down for the limit.

Johnson's seconds were as happy as a bunch of minstrel men, and as they cut the gloves from their man's hands laughed and hollered across to Grim's seconds. Johnson was telling them that if the fight had been just a minute longer he would have had the Italian out for good. He caught him right with the last punch and Joe's eyes rolled, his legs lost their strength and he fell like a log in a pile of hot tar. If Joe Grim ever had a narrow escape before he surely had another this night.

They started off like two hurricanes meeting. Johnson rushed, swinging both hands to the body and driving stinging rights to the back and kidneys. Grim covered up and smiled until the storm blew over and then danced around the ring out of harm's way while the black giant crowded him close, looking for an unguarded place. Twice he caught Grim off his guard and dropped him, but Joe rolled over and got on his feet again before 10 was counted, wearing that same confident smile.

JOHNSON worked like a demon trying to put him out in the initial round, but try as he would there was no quit in Grim. The punches that he took, it seemed, would kill an ordinary man, but he merely shook his head or fell on the ropes, smiling as though he was getting a haircut.

In the second Johnson changed his tactics. He rushed no more, he fed Joe light lefts, trying to get a return that would leave an opening. He tried and tried in vain. Grim led, but as soon as he landed or missed, covered up tighter than a ball of yarn and left no more openings. Johnson uppercut on the gloves and pounded Grim on the back of the head, but the blows seemed to have no effect. He caught the Italian with a smashing left full on the nose at the bell and blood spurted in all directions.

The same tactics were used in the third and Grim smiled all the way, jollying Johnson and sticking his fingers up to his nose, while the crowd laughed itself sick. Grim took his pummeling good naturedly and Johnson had to laugh himself as he rammed them in one after another.

In the course of the fight Grim took the count on 18 different occasions.

McVEY TO TRY TO PIN KAYO ON JONES

Only a knockout victory will satisfy Jack McVey, the Harlem negro, in his battle for the colored middleweight championship of the world in the feature bout of the double wind-up at Braves Field next Monday night, where he clashes with Gorilla Jones, who recently knocked out Al Mello in this city.

Upon McVey's arrival in the Hub, the hard hitting New Yorker, who is only 24 years old, let it be known that unless he wins by the knockout route, he seldom waits for the decision of the referee on account of the fact that he is [illegible] to [illegible] decision.

McVey is known as the [illegible] boxer for [illegible] has [illegible] but few [illegible] each time he was the [illegible] of a [illegible] on the part of [illegible] referees and [illegible] goes in for nothing but knockout victories.

He demonstrated this fact in his only appearance in the Hub when he stopped Arthur Flynn of Lawrence and while he realizes that Jones is a tremendous puncher, he feels confident that he can stop him too.

Jones and McVey arrived in the Hub within a few minutes of each other and today they go through their training work at local gymnasiums. McVey has been training at Harlem while Jones came here from Bedford Springs, Pa., where he has been training with K. O. Christner. The latter meets Otto Von Porat in New York June 27.

Loss of Evans Sad Blow to Massachusetts Tech Crew

COLUMBIA STILL IS FAVORITE

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 21—Massachusetts T[illegible] eight, [illegible] of the [illegible] the annual [illegible] day, was [illegible] definite [illegible] Evans, No. 2 [illegible] she.

Columbia remains the favorite here for the big race, especially as two members of the Cantabs' eight, Ward von Tilk [illegible] and Bill Thompson, No. [illegible] were forced by illness to forego practice for a day or two.

Though Coach Ky Ebright is sure that they will be O. K. for the race, it is certain that a tough siege of stomach trouble aggravated by the extreme heat is not anything that can be forgotten by the victims in a short time.

The men are apt to lack the stamina necessary in the [illegible] four mile or [illegible] An [illegible] but [illegible] picked [illegible] crew [illegible] in the past.

ABOUT the only crew that seems to have dodged the bad effects of working in the heat is the favored Lion eight of Rich Glendon. The coach and Doc Barrett, trainer extraordinary of the squad, have kept the men in perfect condition.

The Columbian crews invariably have rowed, at least for the hot spell, during the very early morning hours, before the sun became bothersome, and the late rowing sessions have been gone through in the evening after the sun dropped out of range.

Cornell is the most improved eight on the river. Jim Wray's forces are causing Glendon and Ebright more worry than at first. The Cornell crew averages 170 pounds. This is rather heavy but the men pull every ounce of their weight and work smoothly.

However, the crew is using the Jim Wray stroke, which calls for most of the rowing to come from the arms. This is fine on a sprint race, but is likely to become quite a strain before the conclusion of a four mile stretch.

The Columbia and California rowing systems use a long layback at the end of each stroke, thereby getting much of the rowing power from the body.

Hagen and Smith In New York Open

Rye, N. Y., June 21 (INS)—Walter Hagen, British open champion, and Horton Smith, youthful Joplin, Mo., professional and sensation of the winter golf season, drew the largest galleries this morning as the contenders in the New York State open championship teed off on the Westchester Biltmore Country Club links.

Hagen was a decided favorite to capture the title won by Willie Klein at Rochester last year. Smith was making his first competitive appearance in the metropolitan district.

Other stars in the lists included George Voigt, Bobby Cruickshank, Joe Turnesa, Eddie Driggs, Eddie Held and Maurice McCarthy. [illegible] Two rounds will be played today and the two remaining rounds tomorrow.

TWINS SHOW CRITICS

By BERNICE AND PHILLIS ZITENFIELD.

(Fifteen-year-old twins training to swim the English Channel, Dover, England, June 21) (Special Cable.)

The way to show 'em is to show 'em. We don't remember reading that anywhere, but it's good advice. There were a lot of skeptics around here when we arrived, but they're scoffing no more.

One of those who was doubtful and frankly so, about our chances was Bill Kellingly, famous local trainer, who has trained more successful Channel swimmers than you or we can remember.

We showed him a thing or two in our workouts, and he was very much impressed with what people call our enthusiasm.

Now he's very much with us and has become one of our loyal followers. His expert knowledge of conditions, tides, etc., will be of great benefit to us in our future work and in our final Channel try.

Today completes our first week of sea swimming practise. We feel that we've made real progress. So much so that we wanted to go out to mid channel as far as Goodwin Sands but we were told not to do that yet.

On our trial swims, the beach has been filled with curious and eager spectators who came in omnibuses from neighboring resorts. They arrive daily, anxious to see our workouts in which we employ the crawl exclusively.

GOLF NOTES

The Salem and Belmont Spring country clubs will be the mecca of local golfers today. The Belmont Retail Store owners and executives will convene at Salem for their 9th annual golf tournament this afternoon, while the open tournament players will gather at Belmont Spring.

Record breaking fields are expected at both Salem and Belmont Spring. Although the Boston Retail Store players will not get underway until this afternoon, the Salem Country Club is in for its busiest day.

For those who play at Belmont Spring either today or tomorrow it will be advisable to telephone Charlie Kelsey for starting times. There will be a bad jam at Belmont tomorrow and if possible players should make arrangements to get in their round this afternoon.

The Belmont Spring Country Club has offered an exceptionally fine assortment of prizes, all of which are sterling. There will be a special prize, a pair of French Shriner and Urner golf shoes, for the longest drive off the 14th tee, each day.

Jack McCarthy, who is the Boston Retail Store champion, was out for a workout, in preparation for today's battle at Salem, at Belmont Spring, his home course, last night. Jack has not played as regularly as in past years, but he is still the favorite for top honors at the Witch City club.

FAMOUS GIRL ATHLETES IN LEGION MEET

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Many champions will compete in the girls' track and swim meet which will be one of the features of the American Legion barbecue and field day, to be held at Norumbega park, Auburndale, tomorrow afternoon.

Albina Osipowich of Worcester, Olympic 100-meter champion swimmer; Mary Carew, Medford, national indoor 40-yard dash champion; Katherine Mearls, joint American record holder in the 50-yard dash and national standing broad jump champion; Rena MacDonald, New England indoor and outdoor shotput champion and American indoor record holder; New England [illegible] champion and record holder, and Jean McSheehy, Whitinsville C. A., national and New England indoor swim champion, are among the entrants.

The American Legion committee headed by Julius Haller, has already received over 100 entries. Although the Barbecue and Field Day starts as early as 10 o'clock, the track meet is not scheduled until 2.30 o'clock with the swimming competition set for 4.15.

Why New York? Outsider Tells City's Place in Sun

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, June 21—New York is misunderstood. And that statement does not come from a New Yorker.

B. C. Forbes

Why is it that writers in every other city take pride in upholding their town whereas New York [illegible]? Possibly it is because there are relatively few native New Yorkers.

To have New York favorably appraised by an outsider is so unusual as to attract attention.

I have been accused of writing more about other cities than about New York. And I am inclined to think the charge is true. Somehow it does not seem to be anybody's business to induce writers to tell of the attractions and the wonders of the metropolis, whereas the moment you step off the train in other community you are [illegible] supplied with favorable material. New York and New York organizations seem to take the attitude that New York talks for itself [illegible] good wine. Incidentally, that is exactly the attitude the Englishman takes regarding Britain.

Were I to undertake to extol New York [illegible] doubtless I would be [illegible] New York [illegible] by an outsider.

Walter [illegible] economist [illegible] well-known New [illegible] brokerage firm that has [illegible] principal cities of the country, in a series of studies 'Why American Cities Grow,' says of New York:

'The Civil War left New York the undisputed financial hub of the United States; the Great War left it the financial hub of the world.

Nearness to Western Europe, formerly the only worthwhile commercial center [illegible] America had [illegible] a fan-like tail [illegible] spreading westward through the Ohio Valley, then the Mississippi Valley, and finally the West, gave New York—ready by temperament, nature and the heritage left by the Dutch and the English—its larger opportunity.

"Men of enterprise and genius, attracted by the success of others came in ever increasing number. Once established as the center of North American inspiration, growth feeding upon itself gained in geometric ratio. Today money flows there for [illegible] but on where needed. Ships [illegible] there because [illegible] cargo. Men [illegible] environment [illegible] field.

New York [illegible] find the means of [illegible] for [illegible] population, industry, business, shipping. It never [illegible] more of anything [illegible] the [illegible] that it has [illegible] for half a century congestion has been its chief concern.

Like a great human heart it draws the life current, then sends it back as vitalizing nourishment through the arteries of commerce and finance.

A single life insurance company here must find investments each year for some $100,000,000 of money. And so supplies mortgage loans to home builders in a thousand cities and towns in the United States.

In the city are centered there not the factories and the mills, but the brain that regulates mighty enterprises so that ships, railroads, skyscrapers, commerce, may serve the development needs of millions of people in many states and countries.

New York supplies the money that enterprise requires. It serves all communities in many essential ways. The daily news of the world comes there to the hub around which the wheel of American [illegible] revolves, for [illegible].

[illegible] few people ever [illegible] the highly important part New York constantly plays in the [illegible] life, progress and prosperity of even the most distant [illegible] and hamlets. New Yorkers [illegible] feel the remainder of the country does not wholly approve of them or of their city, when [illegible] the reverse would be true were New York better understood.

It is not understood even by its own inhabitants. Its functions are complex, sometimes obscure; always essential.

Its safety depends on the safety of the country; its welfare on the general prosperity. Even New Yorkers know that alone, New York could not survive.

If you are not unreasonably prejudiced, you will admit that there is fundamental truth in this description of America's largest city.

Benefits From Farm Law Likely to Be Gradual

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, June 21—Congress by a wave of the legislative wand has ordered farm relief, and President Hoover is seeking to select men for the new Federal Farm Board who can translate a wish into a reality.

Farmers will be disappointed if they expect immediate [illegible] boosts in earning power because of the creation of the Federal Farm Board and the stabilization corporations authorized by the act which is now before Congress. The best that can be expected from the new agencies is a long term beneficial effect on the organization of agricultural marketing and production. Such a disinterested, non-partisan observer as the Harvard Economic Society, in its current weekly letter, says in referring to the new instruments authorized for farm relief, "they will never have an very significant effect on the level of prices of farm products. So far as the immediate future is concerned they are as likely to lower farm incomes as to raise them. It is doubtful if any program of increasing the carry-over of large crops can be put into effect without lowering prices more in the year following, than it will raise them in the year of such carry-over."

As for the crop year which comes to an end on June 30, gross cash receipts from sales of all crops, livestock and livestock products are likely to run 4 per cent above those of the preceding crop year. If this estimate is fulfilled, the crop year, 1928-29, will be the most productive since 1920-21 deflation, running about 1 per cent above 1925-26, the previous peak. Out of the increase in gross, farmers are likely to show a 10 per cent increase in profits over the previous year.

Of course, the closing weeks of the current crop year have been marked by a sharp drop in the prices paid to farmers, resulting from the slump in cotton and cotton seed and grains. The full effect of the decline in wheat will not be felt until the new crop year.

In spite of the loose political talk concerning the distress of farmers, farm income has shown a steady annual increase since the depression of 1921-22, with the exception of the crop year of 1926-27. Various independent statistical data indicate that the worst of the crisis has been passed. Farm foreclosures are fewer, bank failures in the agricultural regions are smaller than at the peak. Moreover, the net flow of population from rural to urban centers declined from 900,000 a year in 1925 and 1926 to 600,000 a year in 1927 and 1928.

But the irritation of the farmer springs from the fact that his relative place in the community is relatively less favorable than before the war. Economists ascribe this depreciated status of the farmer to a world-wide expansion in agricultural production which was stimulated by the rising prices of farm products during the first two decades of the twentieth century. The increase in production came not only through opening up virgin fields in the newer countries, such as the United States, Canada and Argentina, but also in the increased use of fertilizer and other scientific means of heightening production in the older farms of Europe.

The use of farm machinery has played a big role in enlarging the agricultural output, and for the present there is little disposition to share the fears of Economist Malthus that the population might increase far too rapidly for the food supply to keep pace.

The American farmers' troubles have been intensified by a widespread [illegible] of improving rural schools and roadways which have greatly augmented the farmers' tax burden. Furthermore, high wages in the cities have perhaps [illegible] the cost of the products which farmers buy.

The broad period of expansion seems to have been checked, and the development of the future will probably be to heighten farm profits through reducing production costs through the introduction of labor saving machinery, scientific methods of cultivation, and other agencies. Accordingly, farm economists are hopeful that the long term trend of farm incomes will be gradually upward. If this hope is realized the decline in farm land values should be checked. In the next decade there is likely to be extraordinarily rapid increase of the use of power on the farms. Accordingly, more will be produced with fewer farm hands, and therefore the drift to the towns may well continue.

The Hoover agencies will be able to guide farmers in following these hopeful new tendencies. The administrative program, which thus far has averted the threat of an equalization fee or debentures, is free from artificial patent medicine remedies. The President has publicly expressed a sense of difficulty in finding the right men for the job. In addition to dirt farmers, men of the stamp of Owen D. Young and Bernard M Baruch, who are themselves part time farmers, would enormously heighten the prestige of the Farm Board.

BOSCH WINNER IN IMPORTANT LAW SUIT

Justice Crain of the New York Supreme Court has filed a decision in the case of the American Bosch Magneto Corp. against Robert Bosch Magneto of New York city enjoining Robert Bosch Co. from using word "Bosch" or "Robert Bosch" in selling or advertising of magnetos or other automobile electric equipment.

The American Bosch Magneto Corp. is the successor of the former German-owned Bosch Magneto Co. of Springfield. The stock of this company was seized by the alien property custodian during the war and was sold for $4,150,000 to those who organized the present American Bosch Magneto Corp. The founder of the old Bosch Magneto Co. was Robert Bosch of Stuttgart, Germany. The alien property custodian seized the stock as belonging to Robert Bosch, an enemy alien, in 1921.

E. R. Buckner of Root, Clark, Buckner, Howland & Ballantine, attorneys for the American Bosch Magneto Corp., said the decision was an important one as protecting the rights of those who bought seized property from the alien property custodian.

Mr. Buckner says the defendant served notice that he would appeal the case and that Justice Crain would grant a stay of the execution until a higher court could pass upon the decision. Mr. Buckner added however, that he had no fear of Justice Crain's decision being upset.

Views of Wall Street

Allied Power, which owns control of Commonwealth Power, holds a unique position in the utility field and is said to be slated for consolidation with the new New York upstate utility combine or with United Corp.

A merger with American Water Works is rumored for Standard Gas & Electric. Other companies are mentioned, too, and well-informed interests have set a goal of $150 a share for Standard Gas. The stock is selling out of line with other utilities.

A fast mover and a subsidiary of Standard Gas is Standard Power & Light, on the curb. It moves in sympathy with the parent stock.

The splitup in Electric Investors is getting nearer day by day. One would not be surprised if an announcement were made within the next month.

Wall Street gossip says Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, one of the few independents left after the maze of mergers, will soar higher than its record price of 160.

Announcement that Loft, Inc. will acquire 68 candy stores, and is angling for Curtiss Candy Co. of Chicago and Page & Shaw, brought a fractional recession in Loft stock. Merger announcements usually bring temporary setbacks.

With all the wild enthusiasm over public utility shares, American Telephone & Telegraph apparently has been overlooked. Given a market valuation of over thirty times its earnings such as is the case with the average of other utility stocks, A. T. & T. would be selling well over $300 a share. Selling now around nineteen times its last year's net per share, the stock is attracting the strongest investment buying. The company enjoys a stability which few enterprises can claim. The yield on the regular cash dividend is not high, of course, but to this must be added the additional income derived regularly from "rights," averaging a few dollars per share annually.

Universal expectation is voiced of favorable dividend action by Hudson Motor directors at their meeting July 26.

Houses identified with leading banking interests were reported the largest buyers of Pullman Company, about which a favorable opinion was expressed. The stock has not done much marketwise in recent months but enjoys the highest rating. There is some possibility of an increased dividend. The demand for railroad equipment is showing increase and the company has always maintained a powerful financial position. It closed 1928 with net working capital of $72,645,000, with cash and marketable securities alone totaling $69,000,000.

Favorable sentiment toward Postum is induced by realization that it ranks as one of the largest food enterprises in the world, having been built up in aggressive fashion from a company originally interested in only a single product. Recently the company secured the additional banking sponsorship of one of the most powerful financial groups and it is likely that this new friendship will find reflection in the future activities of Postum. The company would furnish desirous basis for any gigantic consolidation of food products companies.

Buying of New York Central is described as of "good quality." The stock, it is pointed out, is one of the premier investment rails and may earn close to $18 this year, inclusive of subsidiary equities. This would compare with just under $15 in 1928. Reported plans for organization of a new securities company hold out promise that stockholders may receive "rights."

Survey of Chrysler's market action since the beginning of the year, a broker said, considering distribution is noted between 100 and 110 and additional selling around the 92 to 96 level. When the stock finally broke through 90 and dropped down below 70 for a matter of three or four weeks, he adds, it was accomplished on comparatively small volume, "thereby indicating that on any upswing there should not be much stock in supply until the former distribution level of 90 to 95 is reached again."

CHEMICAL IS UP $19 A SHARE IN WALL ST.

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, June 21—Good news from the steel trade stimulated active buying of the steel stocks. American Steel Foundries was again the leader of the independent steels, with active buying above 68, and United States Steel common sold actively above 179.

A 19-point jump in Allied Chemical pushed that stock through to 311. Allis Chalmers jumped $15 and Adams Express $39 a share.

Union Carbide, Johns Manville and other high-priced speculative favorites were again in good form rising buoyantly to the best prices of the move, and in some cases the highest prices of the year. Yellow Truck was a favorite around 43, and Postum above 75. These stocks for the first time since Monday drew the spot-light from the utilities, which have virtually held a monopoly of speculative trading.

N. Y. CENTRAL LEADER.

New York Central led the rails, with a 2½ point rise to 202. Call money renewed at 7 per cent.

A number of old favorites returned to the active list in the early trading today, and joined with the utilities in the forward movement of prices.

Demand for some of these stocks was based on expiration of the "rights" which have been clogging the market for the last month or two, and in which hundreds of millions of dollars have been tied up.

Anaconda Copper forged ahead 3 points on heavy buying to 114½, at which price the stock showed a recovery of 15½ points from the May 27 break. Anaconda Wire & Cable, a subsidiary, pushed along to 71½, completing a gain of 9 points on the move.

Baldwin Locomotive, a famous speculative actor of other years sold up to 248 on reports that the contemplated split-up of the shares soon would be announced.

MERGER ISSUES QUIET

For the 136,000,000 increase in brokers' loans, Wall Street was inclined to point to the large bulk of stocks sold during the week on expiring rights rather than to margin trading on the stock exchange, though the recovery in the market was a factor in the increased borrowings from the banks. In any case, the money situation looked good to the bulls, who loom for a much easier tone after the turn of July.

In the absence of definite information about the merger terms of Consolidated Gas and Brooklyn Union Gas (if any) traders were mystified at the continued soaring of the Brooklyn Union stock, which jumped an additional six points to 212, up 34 points since Tuesday.

The Morgan food merger stocks were quiet and inactive, since accurate information about the merger terms had leaged out in advance of the official announcement.

Prices Are Irregular on the New York Curb

New York, June 21 (INS)—The Curb market was mixed today. Goldman Sachs advanced 1⅛ to 103⅞ and Newmont Mining gained ¼ to 195⅛, while Electric Bond & Share lost ¾ at 110⅞. United Gas Improvement was down ⅝ at 222¾.

Cotton Spindleage in Month Larger

Washington, June 21 (INS)—The Census Bureau announced today that there were 35,107,008 cotton spinning spindles in place in the United States May 31, of which 30,910,282 were operated at some time during the month, compared with 30,924,184 in April, 30,757,552 in January and 28,948,144 in May a year ago. The aggregate number of active spinning hours during the month was 9,164,542,116.

There were 18,818,864 spindles in place in cotton-growing states in May, 14,942,592 in New England states and 1,445,552 in all other states.

Invites Canadians to Visit Vermont

Montreal, June 21 — Governor John E. Weeks of Vermont addressed the radio audiences of seven Canadian National Railway stations from Moncton, N. B. to Jasper National Park in the Canadian Rockies from C. N. R. M. here.

The governor's address was in the form of an invitation to his Canadian listeners to visit Vermont as the "Switzerland of America" and the other New England States.

96,000,000 INTERESTED IN MARKET

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor

William C. Durant, former Boston "auto wizard," declares: "While we have today upwards of 15,000,000 stockholders and co-partners of record in our industrial, railroad and public utility enterprises, it is estimated over 80 per cent of our population is directly or indirectly interested in our security market."

The latest estimate of the population of the United States that we have at hand is above 120,000,000. This would make a total of about 96,000,000 "interested" in the stock market, according to Mr Durant's estimate.

The day when brokers' loans will amount to ten million dollars is foreseen by the Business Economic Digest of which Gage P. Wright is president. In a copyright review the Digest says: "Perhaps there never was a time when it was more hazardous for economists or forecasting organizations to attempt to predict the probable course of money rates than during the last 12 to 18 months. It is also true that throughout the last year, attempts on the part of most economists to forecast the probable trend of interest rates, by a careful consideration of the fundamental factors governing the money market, repeatedly have been incorrect. Of course, it is well-known that the money market has not been permitted wholly to follow its natural course or to keep in line with basic conditions. Artificial influences that have been brought to bear by the Federal Reserve Board have done much to direct the trend of interest rates irrespective of fundamental developments.

"The authority exercised by the Federal Reserve Board, and the wisdom of its policies, are subjects upon which there is a wide divergence of opinion wherein most discussions center around the possibility of any individual or group of individuals having the ability correctly to conclude that there is credit inflation in the stock market or that brokers' loans are dangerously high, to mention two of the outstanding phases involved. One need not possess an extraordinary memory to recall the flood of pessimistic utterances when brokers' loans reached a total of three billion dollars. It is not inconceivable that brokers' loans will eventually total ten billion dollars. Then, in retrospect, the present figure of more than five billion dollars will seem as reasonable as the three billion dollar level of a few years ago now appears.

"Although relatively high money rates have been artificially maintained, it is generally agreed that the supply of credit is abundant. One authority says: 'If a reason for continued high money is sought in the country's total gold stock, in the gold reserves of the Federal Reserve banks or in the relationship between these reserves and loans, the explanation for the maintenance of high credit is not apparent.' As we have repeatedly pointed out, no probability of a money stringency existed at any time in the period under discussion. Therefore, it is rather evident that any appraisal of the money situation must seriously recognize the probable policy of the Federal Reserve Board as well as basic conditions wherein the law of supply and demand would hold dominant sway.

"Authorities who have analyzed the situation from this standpoint seem inclined to believe that there is a strong probability of the removal of a large part of the restrictive policy toward credit which has been exercised by the Federal Reserve system during the last year. In conclusion, we believe that clients may plan on a slightly easier money situation prevailing during the second half of the current year."

U. S. Department of Commerce figures issued today show a large increase, as compared with last year, in automotive production, confirming advices we had already received from leading manufacturers. May production (factory sales) of motor vehicles in the United States, as reported to the department, was 603,969 of which 516,055 were passenger cars, 86,596 trucks, and 1318 taxicabs, as compared with 621,331 passenger cars, trucks and taxicabs in April and 425,783 in May, 1928.

Steel industry also shows good gains over its status a year ago. New orders of fabricated structural steel in May as reported to the Department of Commerce by the principal manufacturers, were 90 per cent of capacity, based on total orders of 276,116 tons reported by fabricators with a capacity of 306,620 tons per month, as against April orders of 87 per cent of capacity and 80 per cent a year ago.

Early last year attention was called in this column to the rising tide of extravagance in many cities and towns. The menace was also noted by the then Governor Fuller and also by numerous organizations in the fields of business and finance. The tide does not appear to be subsiding. According to an analysis made annually by C. E. Rightor, chief accountant of the Detroit Bureau of Governmental Research, Inc., the trend of municipal indebtedness is decidedly upward.

Ten comparable cities in group 1 (excluding New York, Los Angeles, Washington and Pittsburgh) show an increase in total gross debt in past year of $146,010,928, or a per capita increase of $12.40. Only one of the 10 cities—Cleveland—had a decrease. Showing that municipal indebtedness increases with population as well as time, Mr Rightor's analysis points out that the weighted average of per capita net non-self-supporting debt for group 1 cities is $103.37, and exclusive of New York, $97.08.

Not only automobile companies but also marine builders are entering the aviation field, it becomes known today. The Alto-Elco Aircraft Co. has been organized for the future manufacture of aeroplanes, H. R. Carse, president of the Electric Boat Co. states. The new company will remain for the present more or less a paper organization, functioning as a subsidiary for the Electric Boat Co., with the same officers and directors.

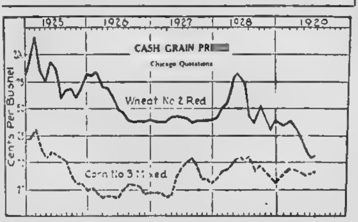
In making the announcement, Mr. Carse said: "We have no definite working plans in mind at present but felt the wide interest in aviation necessitated a concern with the facilities of Electric Boat Co. getting into position to share in the production of planes when conditions justify turning part of our plants into this line of work."

* * *

Mr. Carse states that business for Electric Boat for the first five months this year was slightly better than for the corresponding period of 1928 and that the outlook justified optimism. The company's motor boat plants are said to be running to capacity. Important contracts for submarines for several foreign governments are still pending but it is expected that the company's chief subsidiary will receive these contracts within 60 days, which will result in the company operating all plants at maximum capacity for several months.

WHEAT IS STUDIED



One of the major economic developments of the year has been the wide decline in grain prices.

The fall of wheat values has been particularly drastic, quotations at the close of May reaching the lowest level in 15 years. Since then the decline has been checked and there has been some recovery, partly due to the prospect of government relief, according to John J. Martin, president of the Exchange Trust Company.

Wheat's recession resulted from the great world crops of 1928, together with the fact that the approach of the new harvest in this country finds a large surplus of unused wheat on hand.

World stocks of wheat at the beginning of June were estimated at 200,000,000 bushels greater than one year before. Although the drop in wheat quotations was severe, its effect upon farmers' incomes was not great because most of the 1928 crop had been sold previously, and the crop of this year had not yet been harvested.

The trend of prices will largely depend upon prospects for this year's crop in this country and in other parts of the world. The June crop report of the government estimates a yield of winter wheat of 822,148,000 bushels, compared with 595,535,000 bushels one month before and 512,252,000 bushels one year before.

The crop outlook for this year is the largest since 1926, and the acreage of winter wheat—40,457,000 acres—is the largest since 1922.

CHANGE IN RAIL RATES FOUGHT

The New England printing and wrapping paper industry may be hard hit if the proposed revision of railroad freight rates now under consideration in the Eastern class-rate investigation is adopted, according to arguments filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission by Frederick Manley Ives, counsel for the New England Paper and Pulp Traffic Association.

The organization takes exception to the findings of Atty. Examiner Hosmer, filed more than a year ago, after hearings had been held throughout official territory.

There are three subdivisions of official territory for rate-making purposes: New England and New York city, when rates between a New England point and New York city are concerned; trunk-line territory, which is the territory between New England and a line drawn through Buffalo and Pittsburgh and central territory, which lies west of the Buffalo-Pittsburgh line.

Under the existing arrangement, rates between New England and central territory are made on a grouping system. In the latter case, practically all of New England, except the extreme northern and eastern parts of Maine are grouped with the eastern part of New York State and have paid the same class rates to Chicago.

In the interest of uniformity, it is now proposed to introduce mileage scale rates.

The New England Paper and Pulp Traffic Association is a voluntary organization of mills that make wood pulp, and printing and wrapping paper (not newsprint) in New England.

Williamson Looks for Large Gains

"Our net before taxes and rentals for four months this year increased $2,200,000 over 1928 period, and with May estimated the increase for five months will be about $3,000,000," said President Williamson of Burlington.

"The larger portion of this increase was due to reduction in operating expenses. Net is more than during the same period of any previous year.

"Net of Colorado & Southern for five months increased about $130,000 over last year. May net was slightly better than last year. June loadings are holding at about same level as a year ago."

MANHATTAN Shirt Company reports for six months ended May 31 net of $507,842 after interest and reserve for federal taxes, against $648,035 a year before.

SAYS STOCK TAX IS DANGEROUS TO COUNTRY

By W. S. COUSINS

NEW YORK, June 21.—It has long been recognized as a fundamental principle in government and economics that the power to tax is the power to destroy. Excessive taxation has in times past eliminated without ceremony undesirable factors of national life and activity, while wise and reasonable taxes have produced needed government revenue without imposing burdens on those who pay the tax, either directly or indirectly.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, who has introduced into the Senate a bill to tax all stock sales 5 per cent, where the purchase and resale of the stock is completed within 60 days, admits the tax is not intended as a revenue-producing measure, but a measure to kill off excessive speculation in stock.

Senator Glass is one of the ablest economists of the upper House; a co-farmer of the Federal Reserve act; an expert on all matters related to government and corporation finance. His advice has frequently been sought in banking and financial circles. He has expressed deep concern for the welfare of the country as affected by the heavy increase in stock speculation (which he does not hesitate to call pure gambling) and the diversion of bank credit into speculative channels.

The power to tax this stock speculation is the power to put an end to it, said the senator, when he introduced his bill, but in making the impost only on stocks re-sold within 60 days of purchase the lawmakers have made a conscientious effort to differentiate between "legitimate investing and get-rich-quick" speculation.

Ask any nimble in-and-out trader on the stock exchange how easy it would be to get rich quick on the complicated process of buying and selling stocks with an imposition of a 5 per cent tax on top of the numerous taxes and high commissions now being paid for brokerage services, etc., and he will without hesitation reply, it can't be done.

President E. H. H. Simmons of the New York Stock Exchange, in discussing this subject before the Virginia bankers' convention at Old Point Comfort, points out how impracticable a 5 per cent tax on stock sales would be.

"The present tax on stock sales," said Mr. Simmons, "is already the highest rate in American history, amounting to about one-fiftieth of 1 per cent. The proposed rate of 5 per cent would therefore be 250 times as great as the present rate. The existing rate produced in the calendar year 1928 slightly more than $30,000,000 and if the proposed tax did not reduce the activity of the security business of the country it would yield in taxes over $7,500,000,000—of course a wholly preposterous situation."

The preposterous part of this equation is in supposing that the "activity of the security business of the country" would not be reduced. More than that: it would be shot to pieces, annihilated and wiped off the face of the earth, which brings us back to the original calculation, namely, the elimination of speculation as the object of the senator's bill rather than a bid for more revenue for the United States Treasury from the security markets.

Getting down to practical matters, which assumes that there is not the spec of a chance of the Glass bill becoming law.

Mr. Simmons lays bare two glaring defects in the proposed measure: first that the imposing of such a tax would interfere with corporate financing in this country and second, that efforts to evade it would force many traders to resort to secret transactions at home or the listing of American securities on the European exchanges instead of on our own. What a harvest that would bring to the bourses of London, Amsterdam, Paris, Berlin and other successful European trading marts.

Without a free and open market for securities on the stock exchanges, says President Simmons, American bankers would be unable to underwrite American securities. This would throw our underwriting business abroad into the laps of foreign bankers, who would be able to use the active and free stock exchanges in their own countries without danger of such prohibitive taxation. The net result of the tax, Mr. Simmons contends, would be to sacrifice present-day American financial leadership.

Under these conditions, it is believed that Senator Glass' bill will be given careful scrutiny before it comes up for final disposition before the legislative bodies.

Investment Trust Earns Over Million

Union American Investing Corporation, an investment trust of the general management type, in its annual report for period June 7, 1928 to May 31, 1929, shows gross earnings of $1,164,931 and net earnings, after all interest expenses, taxes and other deductions, of $851,994, equivalent to $8.34 a share on 102,090 shares of common stock outstanding on May 31.

The balance sheet as of May 31, 1929, shows total assets of $6,265,999, including $2,127,579 cash and call loans. The portfolio of the corporation at cost is $3,976,460. Market value of the portfolio on May 31, 1929, was in excess of cost by $428,896.

BOSTON TRADE IS APACE WITH LAST YEAR'S

R. G. Dun & Co. Weekly Trade Review this week, in its weekly survey regarding trade conditions in Boston: The sale of some merchandise has been further stimulated by the warm weather during the past week and in most lines the volume of business is fair compared to last year's totals. The wool market has been quiet. Foreign wools are slow and little carpet wool is moving. A slight decline in prices is reported in several grades. Woolen goods are selling well and the mills are quite busy at the present time.

The worsted yarn mills continue to be fairly active on old contracts. There is comparatively little new business in the yarn market, and some price concessions are reported. The fine goods mills in New Bedford are seasonably quiet though their activity compares favorably with last year's record. Stocks are comparatively slow, and new orders are coming in rather slowly. Prices are well maintained in all lines of cotton goods. The sale of printed goods by the wholesalers is increasing.

There is some business in the medium and coarser grades of [illegible] and, while there is considerable inquiry for the finer counts, few large orders have been placed. Spinners as a rule are maintaining their prices. Receipts of cotton at the five principal New England mill centers from August 1 to May 31 were 582,610 bales as compared with 613,914 bales for the corresponding month of last year. Current demand is increasing, prices are weak. Demand for [illegible] stuffs is fair and prices are steady.

Contracts awarded during the week in New England amounted to $12,576,800, which is the record figure for this week. Contracts awarded in New England for May amounted to $43,745,300, but this was a decrease of 28 per cent from the May 1928 record.

The principal mills are sawing very little lumber and while the base price of spruce dimension remains at $42 the market [illegible] and comparatively dull. Business in the brick line and cement is moderate and prices are fairly well maintained. Paint business is good, somewhat exceeding last year's figures. The demand for hardwood is decreasing somewhat, but a fair volume of orders is being received.

The sales of pig iron in New England have amounted to about 4,000 tons. Some price cutting is reported, and about 1000 tons went to the local furnace. Structural steel is being turned out on current orders, but very few contracts are reported.

Receipts of fish in Boston during 1928 were 214,000,000 pounds, an increase of over 100 per cent in seven years. There are 229 boats now registered at Boston, as compared with 183 last year. The fish industry has had a very favorable season. Imports during April and May considerably exceeded last year's record, April by over $5,000,000.

Exports have been to date somewhat less than last year's. Employment showed an improvement during May. Metal-working establishments are operating at capacity and some of the textile centers also report full-time operations. Seasonal curtailment in the boot and shoe industry continues. Electrical industries report considerable activity at present and business continues good throughout the metal-working trade.

Prices Rule Steady in Cotton Futures

New York, June 21 (INS)—The cotton market today was moderately active and steady, with prices showing declines of 1 to 4 points owing to further scattered sales over the list. Selling in July by Wall street brokers acting for Japanese interests was partly offset by trade buying. New-crop months were sold by New Orleans and wire houses. There was scattered support from commission houses and spot firms in new crop contracts. The price of July was 18.29c. October (new) 18.67c December 18.85c and May 19.16c.

Standard Oils to Appeal Court Case

Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, Texas Co., Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, and Gasoline Products Corp., the "big four" of the American oil refining industry—will appeal to Supreme Court of the United States to reverse decision of United States District Court, Chicago, which held that pooling of "cracking" patents for producing gasoline by companies and their subsidiaries was illegal. It is understood that each company will take independent action.

Commonwealth Has Big Rise in Profit

Commonwealth Power Corp. reports for 12 months ended May 31, 1929, net of $13,381,837 after taxes, charges, depreciation, subsidiary preferred, dividends, etc., equivalent after dividend requirements on 6 per cent preferred to $6.31 a share on 1,645,064 no-par shares of common, against $10,037,251 or $4.39 a share computed on above number of common shares in preceding 12 months.

MANCHESTER, N. H., awarded $200,000 loan, dated June 20 and due December 12, 1929, to Manchester Safe Deposit & Trust Company at 5.885 per cent.

DILLON, READ & Co., Harris, Forbes & Co and Chase Securities Corporation have arranged a $50,000,000 one-year credit for German government.

WHEAT PRICES IN UPTURN

Chicago, June 21 (AP)—Fresh upturns in wheat values today followed brisk buying, coupled with announcement of reduced estimates of world wheat production this season.

Meanwhile unfavorable crop reports from domestic winter wheat territory southwest continues, as did drought complaints from spring wheat sections northwest.

Opening at ¼ to 1¼ cents higher, wheat afterward scored additional gains. Corn, oats and provisions tended upward also, with corn starting at ⅛ to ⅜ cent advance, and subsequently rising further.

Utilities of Four States Are Merged

Consolidation of public service properties in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia under the name of Inland Utilities, Inc., anounced. Capitalization consists of $3,250,000 6 p. c. debentures, 87,000 shares Class A stock, cumulative participating, and 340,000 shares of no-par common stock. Territory served has population of over 125,000.

Soda Fountain Chain Earnings in Jump

Lessing's Inc., operating a chain of soda fountains, reports for five months ended May 31, 1929, net of $38,837 after federal taxes, depreciation and depletion, equivalent to $1.16 a share (par $5) on 33,434 shares, against $14,126 or 41 cents a share on 34,534 shares a year before.

Aviation Credit Has $90,005 in Earnings

Aviation Credit Corporation, recently organized as part of the Keys-Curtiss group to finance sales of aviation equipment on the instalment plan, reports net earnings of $90,005 for its first two months' operations ending May 31, 1929, after charging off all organization expenses.

Dividend Increase on Insulated Wire

Philadelphia Insulated Wire declared a semi-annual dividend of $2.50, placing the stock on a $5 annual basis, against $4 previously, payable August 1. In addition to regular quarterly dividends the company has been paying extra dividends, usually early in the year.

STANDARD Screw Co. declared extra dividend of $1 and regular quarterly dividend of $2 on common.

LOOK FOR NEW JUNE RECORD FOR AUTOS

Automotive Industries this week will say: The automobile industry has entered the third week of June with heavy manufacturing schedules prevailing at a large number of the factories and there are indications that the seasonal recession in production, long anticipated for the final days of this month will not be as pronounced as previously estimated. While it is true that several well-known manufacturers who are preparing to introduce new models this summer are—as a consequence—operating on greatly reduced schedules, other makers continue to maintain heavy schedules to meet the present demand, and because of the favorable outl[illegible]

It is considered not improbable that the total output for this month will establish a new record for the month of June, exceeding the previous record of 423,195 established in 1928. Factories now preparing for the production of new vehicle have indicated plans for high output schedules in July. This proposed heavy production will largely offset the decline which will be experienced by some of the other manufacturers who have been operating at capacity since the introduction of new models several months ago.

With such plans in prospect it appears fairly likely that a new output record will be set for the month of July this year. Reports from the field indicate that while there is a substantial stock of new cars on hand the demand is well sustained. Used ca[illegible] [illegible] sales. Unusual Profit in Telephone Dealing Arbitraging on a scale in [illegible] the aggregate may [illegible] has been going on [illegible] American Telephone stock and the subscription rights to the new convertible bonds. Briefly, current quotations for stock and rights show about a six-point profit in selling the stock and replacing it next January through conversion of bonds.

Many investment houses have been taking advantage of this arbitrage opportunity, and in order to do so have been borrowing American Telephone stock from customers, paying them, say, $1 and $2 a share for use of the stock. They then sell the stock and buy six rights for each share sold, with the [illegible] of subscribing to the convertible bonds. The next step would be conversion of the bonds in January when the conversion privilege becomes effective, and return of the stock to its owners. Net result: The investor gets back his stock and in the meantime is guaranteed all dividends, rights, etc., which may accrue on the stock with $1 or $2 a share to boot for use of the stock. The banker emerges with a profit equal to around $6 a share of stock sold, assuming the money whose use he has earns 6 per cent.

Apparently the only possibility of this arbitrage going wrong is in the unlikely event of a Telephone stock issue before next January, in which case the banker would be required to pay the lender of the stock the value of the right.

One Tire in Stock for Each Car Run

Total stocks of automobile tires in hands of dealers and manufacturers at beginning of June were equivalent to approximately one tire to each car rolling, it was estimated by members of Rubber Exchange following receipt of preliminary inventory figures from Akron and other manufacturing centers.

Tires in hands of manufacturers at start of June amounted to 17,800,000 casings of all types and sizes. This compares with 16,937,000 tires at the start of May, as reported by the Rubber Association, an increase of approximately 863,000 tires in manufacturers' hands for the month.

Some authorities are disposed to reduce the dealers' inventory total 15 per cent owing to the number of unsold, slow moving and obsolete sizes and grades in hands of dealers.

Data on Brokers' Borrowings Given

Total borrowings by members of the New York Stock Exchange against stock collateral on June 1 amounted to 9.39 percent of the market value of all listed shares, against 9.19 percent May 1, an increase of 0.20 percent during the month. On June 1 the market value of all shares listed was $70,920,426,187, against $73,718,875,840 May 1, a decrease of $2,797,499,653 during the month. During the same period loans to brokers decreased $109,792,470 to $6,665,137,925.

Average market value of shares decreased $6.07 during the month. Average price June 1 was $76.06 a share, against $82.13 May 1 and $80.87 April 1.

Providence Rail's Earnings Increase

Providence, June 21—United Electric Railways Co. reports May net after all deductions of $42,894, a gain of $288 over May, 1928. Net for five months was $186,582, or $65,692 less than a year before. Passenger earnings for May as compared with a year ago decreased $60,376 from operation of trolley cars, and increased $60,972 in earnings from buses.

HUB AUDITOR FAVORS TAX DECREASE

Endorsement of the Boston Evening American's campaign for repeal of the Federal Income Tax was given today by Oscar Grainger, [illegible] and tax expert, of 31 [illegible]

[illegible] but what the Federal tax on earned income is one of the most troublesome items which the average man has to face in making his annual audit. It is scientifically impossible to fix a basis of tax on salaries and professional fees which works with equal justice on all people.

There is a wide diversity in responsibilities as between different persons of equal income. These responsibilities often cannot be calculated according to the regulations of the tax blank. It is easy to [illegible] fairly just tax upon items of wealth, but when we approach items of salaries, fees and [illegible] income we are dealing with imponderables. Initiative, [illegible] handicap and other matters which directly affect earning capacity, are left entirely out of consideration. The law takes cognizance only of the definite matter of income. This attitude cannot fail to work hardship and injustice.

The Boston Evening American and Hearst newspapers are to be congratulated upon their splendid work in forcing the attention of Congress to this important matter. I am sure that their efforts will be crowned with success."

STOCK FRAUD OF $2,000,000 IS CHARGED

Paris, June 21 (AP)—Charges [illegible] investigated here that [illegible] were defrauded of about $2,000,000 through the sale in Paris at exaggerated prices of [illegible] shares of a Los Angeles company which operates copper mines in Arizona. It was stated nothing indicated that the company itself had anything to do with the affair.

Examining Magistrate Audibert, upon a report from secret service men, summoned Louis Bonhomme, alleged to be the organizer of a high pressure sales campaign, to explain the situation and nine small bankers and brokers said to be involved.

It is charged that the shares issued by the company, which was reorganized in 1926, were sold at ten and twenty times their real value through rigged quotations in the over-the-counter market.

TAX SURPLUS $100,000,000

Washington, June 21—A material increase in income tax collections has boosted the Government total revenue for the current fiscal year to $3,730,141,997 as of June 18, giving a present surplus of $101,795,855.

The Treasury's daily statement reported that income tax collections for June 18 amounted to $239,602,309, one of the largest single day's collections ever made.

It raised the total for the month to $359,972,240, or $130,534,951 more than was collected in the same period of last June.

For the fiscal year since June 30 income tax payments have totaled $2,135,426,544 or $190,140,331 more than was collected in the same period last year. The amount is only $48,000,000 less than the total for the entire fiscal year of 1928. The total collections for the current fiscal year, which ends June 30, exceeded those for the same period last year by $38,715,826.

Treasury experts said that upon the basis of present returns all indications pointed to the Treasury having the $100,000,000 surplus on June 30, recently predicted.

MAD RUSH TO BE POPULAR -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Expert on Love Problems Gives Advice to Girl

"Dates."

What enjoyment and fun the word suggests to the up-to-date girl! For dates signify to her, not merely the dictionary definition but popularity and good times. To fill every evening with alluring engagements is the ambition of many a flapper!

Yet dates bring perplexing problems. It is not always easy to figure out the best to date—and when and how! As a matter of fact, [illegible] begin to worry about dates long before [illegible] should. School girls [illegible] often expect to give [illegible] of their time to [illegible] study and rest.

[illegible] college offer a marvelous opportunity for acquiring [illegible] health of mind and [illegible] to prepare for future [illegible] should not for one [illegible] be allowed to interfere with [illegible] devoted to study, athletics [illegible] and the early [illegible] so vital to your future health and good looks.

Would you like to have the most [illegible] man in the world in [illegible] with you? Here is a description of the girl he has fallen in [illegible] as she appeared to her [illegible] friends while in school last year:

"She is quiet and unassuming with a sweet disposition. She [illegible] very little while [illegible] devoted to her [illegible] with charming unaffected ways."

You will find that girls of highest [illegible] and utmost [illegible] who later on marry [illegible] and are leaders—[illegible] of the chance to [illegible] efficiency and health while at school and do not [illegible] with dates.

When [illegible] days are over, Miss [illegible] going into business or [illegible] Society with a [illegible] if she allows [illegible] her leisure to [illegible]

"I'd much rather stay at home [illegible]," sighs Betty, with a wistful [illegible] her [illegible] chaise-longue [illegible] lamp. "But I have to keep [illegible] to prove I'm popular [illegible] a fat time."

What price dates? And the [illegible] part of it is that many of the [illegible] who were strenuously 'dating' seven or eight years [illegible] are still at it, with vivacity more strained. While the quiet, natural girl who took life a little more simply and was less popular—just the nice, every-day girl—has in [illegible] instances found self-fulfilment through successful marriage, home life, husband, babies.

As a matter of fact, the man you would like to interest will find you more interesting if you very sweetly refuse his invitations now and then. It does no harm to be "engaged" for the evening. Have other interests, other friends. It is better to "turn down" even the most desirable date once in a while, than to go evening after evening with one young man until quite naturally he gets the idea that he is indispensable and it is extremely kind of him to come to see you. Always refuse a date that is undesirable and unwise.

If you reserve sufficient time to yourself to keep poised and rested, dainty and chic and if you study the art of getting on pleasantly with people you will have enough dates. Keep life interesting. Do not strain for popularity. Forget about it! But try to like people—to make them feel good—to get their [illegible]

[illegible], excessive popularity is a much over-rated social asset. A few intimate friends, a circle of worthwhile friendly acquaintances should lead to plenty of fun and [illegible] kind of jolly dates.

Play the game fairly. Do not cut [illegible] girls' dates or interfere with their friendships. Weed out new acquaintances. Remain absolutely loyal to friends. Then you will gradually find a circle of comrades who will bring out your best self and your dates will lead either to fine, sound friendships or happy [illegible]

Beach Combers -:- -:-

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

Beach Combers! The words bring visions of far-off tropic islands and a very different type of beach comber to the one we have in mind. Once they were considered more or less outcasts, but now! Walk along any beach on these lovely summer days and you'll see beach combers who are veritable Loreleis. Whether it be a "wind blown" bob or the "new-fashioned" crown of glory falling in long, soft waves, there they are, calmly combing out their tresses, and I'm sure they know what temptresses they are.

Only, unlike the Lorelei, they never lead to destruction. Rather, they lead to Happiness and Love. For who can resist their charm? Not one of the very best Beloveds who cluster round them. In fact, they're totally oblivious of the admiring glances cast in their direction by passers-by. Their thoughts and hearts are too full of the loved one, and the thought uppermost in their minds is that they must look their very best, so that when Mr. Loved One joins them they'll be—well, irresistible.

Bless their hearts! Some may say they're not modest, but that's so silly! They're just happy, healthy, normal girls, with the same yearnings for Love and Happiness that every woman through the ages has felt. So don't criticize too harshly. Remember your own youth and be tolerant and helpful.

Hot Weather Drinks

On a hot, sultry day, even the sound of ice tinkling against a glass seems cooling, to say nothing of the refreshed feeling which comes with the tartness of the fruit juice. There are also [illegible] things which add to the [illegible] of serving the cooling drinks and which make the serving of them a pleasure.

An ice chipper saves both time and [illegible]. Along with the ice chipper should be found a bottle opener and corkscrew.

A bottle of sugar syrup should always be kept in the refrigerator for sweetening fruit juices. This syrup is made by stirring two cups of sugar and one of water until dissolved. Boil slowly for 5 minutes, skim, cool, and put in the refrigerator for future use.

PINEAPPLE LEMONADE

1 pint water.
1 cup sugar.
1 quart ice water.
1 can grated pineapple.
juice 3 lemons.

Make syrup by boiling water and sugar 10 minutes; add pineapple and lemon juice, cool, strain, and add ice water.

GRAPE JUICE LEMONADE

Use two juicy lemons to 2 cups of water and 2 cups of grape juice and 1 cup of sugar, and for added temptingness ½ an orange. Boil sugar and water for 10 minutes; cool and stir in the grape juice and lemon juice. Cut orange in wafer thin slices, then into eighths and add to the beverage. Serve with chopped ice.

ORANGE PUNCH

1 part orange syrup
2 parts grape juice
6 parts water

Mix and serve in tall glasses with chopped ice in each glass. A maraschino cherry and a few sprigs of mint may be added to each glass if desired.

CHOCOLATE NECTAR

1 c. cocoa
½ tsp. salt

The sugar is dissolved in one cup of the hot water and cooked for five minutes. The cocoa is mixed with the other cup of water and then added to the boiling syrup and simmered for 10 minutes. When cooled, place 2 tbsps. in a glass and mix well with a little milk or cream. Partly fill the glass with chopped ice and fill with milk. A little whipped cream is placed on top.

'Bye for today.

Lead Poisoning

By L. E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

Lead-poisoning is not as uncommon a condition as one might suppose.

It is particularly prevalent, of course, among those who handle lead in their work—such as painters, plumbers and glaziers.

Lead-poisoning is also known as plumbism.

Sometimes plumbism results from drinking water which has been stored in lead-lined cisterns or has passed through lead pipes. Cider and wine which contain acids may become leady through contact with lead containers.

Lead-poisoning has even been caused by the handling of hair dyes, thread, and false teeth. Cosmetics containing lead may cause the disease.

Small quantities of lead may occur in the body in health. In cases of poisoning the lead is found in the urine.

The symptoms of the disease are, first of all, an anemia.

This anemia may become very severe. The red blood corpuscles may be reduced to 30 per cent and their structure changed.

Sometimes, especially in cases of long-standing poisoning, there are abdominal, cramp-like pains.

This rather typical lead colic comes in spasms and seems to involve the entire abdomen. Vomiting may accompany the attacks. There may also be diarrhea.

There are cases where colic and digestive disturbances have been going on for years without the patient suspecting the real nature of his trouble.

Occasionally, in acute cases of poisoning, there are convulsions which simulate epilepsy.

There may also be fever and delirium.

A characteristic of lead-poisoning is the well-known "blue line" on the gums. This sign, however, is not invariably present in all cases of plumbism and workers in lead who do not have it should not therefore consider themselves necessarily immune.

There are really two lines to be seen.

One is between the gums and the teeth, along the edges of the gums, as it were. But it is not in the gums. It is on top of the gums and it can be removed by cleaning the teeth and rinsing the mouth with water or other liquid.

The other line is really in the gums themselves, although at the margin of the gums.

This is the true blue line. It is formed by the absorption of lead and its conversion into a black sulphide, hence the bluish-blackness of the blue line.

The true blue line may appear a few days after exposure to lead. It may disappear in a few weeks or it may remain for a long time, often months.

Paralysis of the arms or legs or both may also result.

Lead is a dangerous metal for the human organism!

Auction Bidding: South with two four-card Major suits, four honors in each, bids his higher ranking suit first, one Spade, and when overcalled by East with two Diamonds shows his second suit by a bid of two Hearts. West passes. North expresses his slight preference by bidding two Spades. East, though holding four honors in Diamonds, has no rebid to three Diamonds following his partner's failure to assist.

Contract Bidding: The bidding would be the same at Contract except that South, following North's preferential bid of three Spades, should bid four Spades for game.

The Play: The play of the hand developed a situation that resulted in setting the Declarer one trick at Auction and three tricks at Contract; and yet the bidding was correct and the opponents had no justifiable double. West opened the King of Diamonds which East covered to continue the suit if West's King should be a singleton. Before returning a Diamond, however, East leads his singleton Ace of Hearts to put himself in a ruffing position. He then leads the 10 of Diamonds rather than the Queen to encourage West to ruff if able and return a Heart. West, understanding the situation, trumps the 10 of Diamonds and returns a Heart, which East ruffs. This play is repeated by the next two tricks, the adversaries thus taking the first six tricks of the hand.

Care of the Hair

By MARIA JERITZA

"How often should the hair be washed?"

This question is frequently asked me. And very often the sad complaint is included in the letter: "Three or four days after a shampoo my hair looks oily and lifeless."

A shampoo and wave twice each week is an inconvenient, if not expensive proposition. If your hair loses its look of vitality and fluffy cleanliness within a few days after it is washed, and if it is not subjected to an unusual amount of dust and grime, then there must be something wrong in the way you shampoo it. The chances are you do not get the soap out thoroughly.

Personally I find once every two weeks often enough for a shampoo, and between washings my hair keeps its light color and lustre perfectly. May I suggest the regime I follow?

Every night before retiring, I have my maid brush my hair for five minutes, with a brush having short wire bristles attached to a rubber pad, so that it can be washed easily. Every second day she washes my brush and comb in warm water with a drop or two of violet ammonia added, and dries them in the sun.

If you brush your own hair you will get the added benefit of exercise for your arms, especially if you use twin brushes. Half an hour before each shampoo my maid warms a small white enamel frying-pan filled with pure olive oil. This she applies to my scalp with pads of absorbent cotton, parting my hair over and over for the purpose.

She washes the oil out with jellied soap, which is made by shaving Castile soap into flakes, then dissolving the shavings in boiling water. Boil the mass until the soap is thoroughly liquefied, then add cold water to reduce it to a comfortable temperature.

In case it is not convenient for you to boil the soap and water to a jelly, place a toilet-sized bar of your favorite soap in a quart glass jar, cover it with warm water and let it stand several days. This should soften the soap to a jelly form.

Wet your hair before applying the shampoo. Then pour on the soap and massage it well into every inch of your scalp and hair. Rinse it out with warm water. Repeat this process of lathering and rinsing a second and if necessary a third time, to get out grime and soap. On thorough rinsing depends the result of your shampoo.

Cold water applied after warm water closes the pores of the scalp. And as the pores are normally open, I do not advocate a final cold rinse for the hair. The juice of a lemon or else one tablespoonful of vinegar may be added to the last rinsing water to break all soap curd and bring out the clean lustre of your hair. But do not use lemon juice or vinegar if you have a permanent, for the acid may weaken the wave.

Dry your hair and scalp with warm towels or by rubbing them with your hands—preferably in sunlight. When your hair is half dry, you should find it easy to train it over your brush in curls or lay it in flat waves, which should be held in place firmly with a loose-woven net until the hair dries. Waving fluid will help straight hair to hold a curl, but naturally, curly hair is better off moistened with water. If your hair is thin and fine it may respond better and look thicker when given a marcel rather than a water wave.

Try washing your hair once in two weeks and giving it a one hundred per cent perfect shampoo, to awaken its sleeping beauty.

Amidst the lighter phases of English life — that which flourishes joyously in the wayside inns, the fashionable drawing-rooms and the charming gardens—the "biscuit" is a dainty favorite. Made of delicately blended flours, shortened with special pastry butter, enriched with eggs and milk and flavored with chocolate, custard or the choicest fruits, this delicious pastry is the product of generations of English baking tradition. So pleasantly have these delicate sweets lingered in the memory of American visitors to England that many have gone to the trouble and expense of importing them. FOREST LOVE by Hazel Livingston business. I caught the look in his eye."

Mystery Serial of Intrigue in California Forests

"You don't miss anything, do you darling?" Nancy countered flippantly, but her color rose. She was suddenly conscious of her tumbled hair, of the tell-tale wrinkles in her brief, corn-color frock. She didn't want Lou to know he had been kissing her. Not that she was ordinarily shy or secretive about such things. Petting parties were common enough in their set, and she had had her share of them, goodness knows. But this . . . this was different. . . . She wanted to keep Mat Tully all to herself . . . to keep him away from the family, from papa's too cordial welcomings, from mama's sly, eager questionings; from Louise's too understanding stare. That was why she had said goodbye to him in the garden though she knew perfectly well they had ordered extra cream for the chocolate, and laid the pound cake in beautiful, overlapping slices on the best Minton plate.

"I—I think I'll go right to bed—I'm awfully tired," she decided hastily, seeing that the family was in a mood for talk.

"Yes, get your beauty sleep," Louise advised acidly, resuming her sewing. "I'll get this finished somehow. You'll want it to impress the Tully person tomorrow night." She lifted the long, billowing skirt of the pale organdie she was working on, trying to catch her sister's averted gaze. "Men always love light blue. He'll go down like a ton of bricks . . . and after all, he's worth struggling for—if he has any money!"

"LOUISE!" Mrs. Hollenbeck gasped. "Mama won't have you talking like that!"

"Well, its the truth. Nancy might do a whole lot worse!"

"LOUISE!"

Little Mr. Hollenbeck slow to interfere in the arguments of his women folk, looked up over his spectacles, and returned to his sport page.

Louise was the older Hollenbeck girl, a little sharp of tongue, a little wistful already at twenty-four. She looked very tired and plain tonight, with her straight, dark hair clinging damply to her forehead and her eyes heavy with fatigue. "The way I'll look in five years, if I stick around home like she has!" Nancy thought seeing for the first time the faint lines under Lou's eyes, the bitter droop of her mouth. Something like panic seized her. Suppose Mat didn't really love her, and she had to wait around year after year, like Lou . . . like the old Arnold girls, still wallflowers at the college dances, still coming to Girls' Friendly meetings, feverishly pretending they were young, and everybody remembering they had their coming-out party in nineteen thirteen . . .

"But I won't be like that," she promised herself quickly. "I'm—different!"

She had only to lift her eyes to the mirror over the mantel. Different! Of course she was different! Nineteen, and as fresh as a flower. Young, and truly lovely . . . the prettiest, prettiest girl in their set . . .

"You don't have to worry about me!" she burst out suddenly. "I won't die an old maid. And besides —Mat Tully isn't such a prize!"

That last was mere school girl bravado, but Louise, stitching wearily on the frock that was to be his down fall, didn't take it as such.

"Neither are you," she returned tartly, keeping her eyes on the sewing, ignoring the almost breath-taking loveliness reflected in the old mirror across the room. She didn't have to look. Ever since she was a pale, gangly-legged girl of five and baby Nancy lay dimpling and cooing in her basket she had been hearing about her sister's beauty.

And now, at 19, it had come to its height. Everything about Nancy, from her warm, flawless skin, to the delicate turn of her wrist and ankle, was perfect. The clear, aristocratic features—the kind the Italian painters loved—the soft russet cloud of her hair, the very curve of her long, dark lashes with curled back from her velvety brown eyes, giving her a faintly surprised small girl expression.

Nancy's perfect mouth hung open. Her jaw dropped. "Why, Lou! Don't you think I'm pretty?" she faltered, her vanity pricked.

Lou stitched on in the electric silence. Mama's chair squeaked. Papa rustled his papers, pretending to read. Nancy, flushed and more surprised than indignant, hung on her answer.

"Oh, it isn't that you aren't pretty," she said finally. "You are, of course. Awful pretty. I didn't mean that you weren't, but who cares? Not Cary Fleming and Gil Neal and all that crowd. They can get a million pretty girls—not as pretty as you perhaps. But pretty enough. The woods are full of them. All looking for men with money. What the men want is someone with a fortune—like May Belle Craig. Or a wonderful place in society like that fat Preston girl. Wonderful chance WE have! Take my advice and grab off the Tully person if you can. He may not have much now, but I'd bank on him getting ahead. You'd never starve with him—he'll make money fast enough!"

"Humm . . . . mmm." Papa cleared his throat nervously. He was sensitive about the subject of money. Poor Peter Hollenbeck, who had never made any money, and owed so much . . . so terribly much . . .

"I'd like to see May Belle Craig or Vera Preston get Mat Tully away from me!" Nancy hadn't meant to say that, it just slipped out.

"Girls!" Mama's little wrinkled hands fluttered in protest. "You mustn't SAY such things. It—it sounds common."

"The truth is always common!" Louise flashed back. "That's why we never hear it around here. We're so—so damned refined we never face anything. We just go on pretending, fooling ourselves, and nobody else—"

"LOUISE!" Mrs. Hollenbeck's voice rose to a shrill whistle, "I won't HAVE it. I don't know where you GET that common streak. I'm sure it's not from MY side of the family. When I was a young girl, I'd no more have thought of cursing at my dear mother than—than I'd have thought of jumping in the b-bay!" Her voice broke, the little claw-like hands groped for her handkerchief, her mild eyes, forget-me-nots in the colorless wreck of her once pretty face, dripped slow tears.

"Kitty, kitty, dear," papa begged, "don't excite yourself. You'll have one of your headaches. Why, Louise didn't mean to hurt your feelings, did you, Lou?"

Mama sniffed hopefully, waiting for the apology. But Louise, tired and angry after a long, hot day of washing and ironing and mending —"pressing out a few things," it was euphemistically called in the Hollenbeck household—shut her mouth tightly, and made it plain that she had nothing more to say.

In the angry silence, punctuated only by mama's heartbroken sniffs and papa's clucking comfort, Nancy slipped upstairs to bed.

It was just as she knew it would be. The family post-mortems were always the same. You couldn't even fall in love decently and quietly. Louise's hawk eye would discover it, and mama would start prying, and in a minute all that would be left of your shining lover would be a few discolored, decomposing shreds. "It isn't FAIR," she whispered, her lips against the pillow. "It isn't fair——"

"Nancy!"

Mama's voice at the door. Nancy lay perfectly rigid, feigning sleep.

"Nancy, it's mama." Mrs. Hollenbeck tiptoed in, and closed the door behind her, switching on the light.

Nancy sighed and sat up. "I should think you'd let me sleep when you know I'm tired, and it's my turn to get papa's breakfast!"

"Lou can get papa's breakfast," mama said absently, ignoring the reproach. "This, this Mr. Tully, dear. Is he one of the Fairchild Tullys? Find out if he's one of the Washington family, dear. They're very fine people. Quite well to do. I thought he had an air about him . . . as if he were used to nice things. When I was a girl I knew an Evangeline Tully. Her mother was one of the Skinners, the sugar people. They kept very fine horses. I remember the livery, plum color with——"

"I'm sure he's no relation," the girl answered patiently. "He's from Kansas City. And Lou's all wrong about his making money. He—he's an idealist. He HATES business men. He told me he did. He hasn't a nickel. He drives the worst old car you ever saw, and he LIKES it!"

For a woman who has just decorated the church and chosen the wedding breakfast, Mrs. Hollenbeck took the blow bravely. Perhaps it was because she had seen so many imaginary bridegrooms shrivel and die.

"Well, don't see too much of him, dear. People might—might misunderstand. I don't want anyone to have the chance to talk about one of my girls." And after a long, uncomfortable pause, "Other young men would think you were interested in him, and . . . that is . . . they would be afraid to pay you attention."

She expected an answer, a protest against giving up the good-looking Mr. Tully so soon, but none came. Nancy lay back against her pillows, her eyes closed, her young mouth sullen and hard.

"Nancy, promise mama you won't do anything foolish!"

The dark lashes quivered. "No, I won't do anything foolish. I must have been crazy to ever think . . . to ever think . . ."

"Tell mama—to ever think WHAT, dear?"

"Oh, to get romantic about Mat. To think I . . . the family . . . oh, please, mama, go to BED!"

"Mama's girlie." The little padded figure in the fraying satin dressing gown leaned closer. Her dry lips brushed Nancy's—and she had never felt so far away . . . so shut out . . . so unwanted . . . "Nancy, speak to mama!" she cried, afraid, afraid of something, of some new unnamed thing coming between her and her girl, her baby. . . .

"What do you want me to say, for goodness sake?" Nancy was watching her, with cold, appraising curiosity.

"It's just that—that you seemed so quiet," she faltered. "Mama was afraid you didn't understand." She wanted to cry out, to gather her daughter to her meagre breast, to croon over her as she did when she was a baby, but she couldn't do that.

She couldn't even talk naturally with Nancy watching her like that, so coldly. . . . "I want you to be happy," she struggled on, awkwardly. "I—I haven't anything in the world but you girls. I'm advising you for your own good. You don't know what it means to be poor—to marry a poor man. I—I did, you know. It's been so hard. Nobody knows. Your father and I have looked forward so to you girls marrying well. . . . ooh, you don't understand!"

She broke down and wept, uncontrollably then, until Nancy, murmuring endearments, took her into her strong, slender arms, and bullied and coaxed her back to calm.

So Kitty Hollenbeck went back to her room comforted, and it was not until she woke at dawn (was that someone crying in the house or just the wind rattling the stiff leaves of the magnolia tree?) that she remembered that all the while Nancy was petting her, her eyes remained hard and cold.

"A trick of the light," she decided. "My girls think too much of their mother . . . good girls . . . don't have to worry about them. . . . I know them too well. . . ."

But it is the unusual mother who knows her own daughter in the year of our Lord, 1929.

The CALL OF THE DESERT by KATHARINE WOOLLEY

A SIX-DAY STORY

CHAPTER 4

"THIS is not the Sahib who arrested me." Daham spoke defiantly and his nasty little eyes flashed into Colin's face.

The result of the questioning showed that Daham was guilty but there was no written document to prove it and he knew he could not be convicted.

At last Stanhope signed to the police to remove Daham, and Ibrahim remained alone in the room with Peters, Stanhope and Colin.

"Now then, Ibrahim," began Stanhope. "How do you explain the letter which you withheld from Mr. Gillespie yesterday, a letter from Sa'ad ibn Rashid with a message in code for you?" Ibrahim's face changed colour.

"I don't understand, sir."

"Stop lying, Ibrahim. I read the code message. It was because of that we raided the meeting last night. You and Sa'ad ibn Rashid and the document with the signatures got away and we want that document. Where is it?"

"I do not know sir."

"Our patience is at an end. Do you wish to be flogged?" Stanhope's voice cut like a knife.

Ibrahim picked himself up and stood rocking on his feet.

"I will lead you to the place where the paper is."

"Where is it?" asked Stanhope.

"It was taken by one of the beni Omeir."

"What, into the Marshes?" continued Stanhope.

"Yes, sir. They thought it would be safe there; but I will tell you how to find it."

"You'll come along with us my man," said Peters, "and if you try any of your dirty Turkish tricks you'll be sorry."

Colin realized the situation was precarious. If Ibrahim's story were true it might almost be best not to chase the document into the Marshes—at least it could do little harm there. But if he were drawing them in the wrong direction whilst the revolt was being organized—what then?

The next three days might decide the fate, not only of the South, but of the whole of Iraq and of every white man and woman in the country. Peters and Stanhope believed that Ibrahim was too scared to betray them, but her sixth sense told her they were being tricked.

She decided to send a message in code to Alasdair, telling him her fears; he might be able to take action at his end.

That trip into the marshes was one that Colin never forgot. Her doubts of Ibrahim were more than justified. Fox that he was he led the canoes further and further into the tangled waterways.

The searchers separated into three parties but when they met again each thought Ibrahim was with the others. A canoe was missing and the wily conspirators had vanished.

Shamefacedly they made their way back to Kalekiyah.

When she reached the house a message from Sandy awaited her.

"I've seen Alasdair and Nuri today, we're agreed on a plan. Tell Stanhope everything if you think best—judge for yourself. S."

What a blessed relief! Colin dropped on to her bed with a feeling of utter gladness. She would have drifted into a day-dream if Abd had not interrupted her.

"Sir, Nuri waits to see you. He is in disguise."

The boy returned with Nuri and left them alone. Nuri spoke in quick sentences.

"Oh, child of my father's friend, your brothers have bidden me speak openly to you. Your elder brother trusted me so much that he told me of you when you came to my house six weeks ago. Now the moment has come to act. There are only two more days for the revolt to break out or be crushed. By the mercy of Allah I know where the document is. It is with Sa'ad ibn Rashid. Here is our plan. Captain Peters will remain in Kelekiyah and Major Stanhope will surround and capture Sa'ad ibn Rashid's tents; you will come with me and we will attack, if necessary, from another side. Your younger brother will be at my house this afternoon, so you will be together." Nuri spoke earnestly and now he seemed to hesitate.

"And one thing more. This your brothers have not said, but I urge it. Not even the English in Kelekiyah know that you are not your brother; do not tell even them until the trouble is over."

"I think it would be well to tell Major Stanhope, Nuri ibn Mahmud; why do you think differently?"

"I do not know why, but I feel it here," he pressed his hand against his heart. "Do not decide too hastily. I will wait outside and Abd will call me. We should be leaving in an hour."

What would Stanhope's words be when she told him? . . . Sandy might be glad of it. With a smile she watched the door burst open and Stanhope's tall figure stride into the room.

"Look here, Gillespie," he cried, "things are getting serious. I wired to have your dealer-spy returned to me, but he's got away. Now Nuri reports that the document is with Sa'ad ibn Rashid and there's a wire from your brother saying I'm to capture Sa'ad whilst you are to be lent to Nuri. Of course I obey his orders, but I'm hanged if I'll be humbugged any more by a lad like you. I want the whole truth about the dealer."

Ah! That stung her! It was going to be so lovely to confess, but not if Stanhope spoke like that.

"That looks like my writing!" Stanhope swooped down and picked up a letter—the letter he had written to her in England, which she could never bring herself to destroy; it had fallen out of her tunic pocket as she was packing.

She leapt forward, her arm outstretched, but Stanhope held the letter high above her head and then looked inside the envelope to make certain.

"My God! Is this what women do?" His face was grey with passion and his voice grated. "I wrote to your sister, she gave me permission to; she did not answer. I even wondered whether my letter had reached her! It certainly did, for here it is! She's sent it on to you, my assistant—to read—to amuse you—a letter only meant for the person it was addressed to . . . But it wasn't meant for her! It was meant for someone I imagined, who, I see, has never existed, not for someone absolutely cruel and heartless."

"How dare you!" Colin's eyes blazed. "My sister isn't a cad, she'd never show your letter to a living soul—"

"Aren't you a living soul? Or are you two such perfect twins that what belongs to one belongs also to the other?" His voice grew more deadly. "I used to envy you your semi-eastern upbringing—I don't any more."

Stanhope tore the letter in two and thrust it into his pocket . . . he paused a moment regaining control and then he spoke in a different voice. "Now about the dealer—"

"I'm sorry, sir, I can tell you nothing more." Her tone was so quiet that Stanhope turned in surprise. Her grey eyes blazed, her body was rigid, she looked the very proudest of her Gillespie ancestors.

"I am sorry, sir," she repeated almost without expression. "I can tell you nothing more now. I will go with Nuri as my brother orders and when the document is in your hands I ask leave to return to Alasdair. Perhaps you will kindly apply for my recall. You need not tell him"—her voice became even quieter—"that you have insulted my sister, believing something despicable of her, and unwilling to listen to any explanation. Oh, yes! "there was an explanation, but my sister does not offer an explanation a second time. If you had been puzzled, angry, I could understand but you thought contemptuously of her and that we'll never, never forget. . . . ."

She crossed the room rather unsteadily, opened a drawer and put into it the large photograph of herself, then turned towards Stanhope.

"Abd will pack up my kit and send it on to me to Baghdad." She hesitated a moment—"Good-bye, sir."

"Good-bye, Gillespie," and Stanhope, injured and betrayed, as he thought, by this boy, yet felt himself dismissed from his presense. He turned and left the room.

For a moment her calmness left her, her hands moved up towards her head with a gesture of despair; then she opened the door.

"Abd! Bring up the man who waits for me." She stood motionless until Nuri's form blocked the doorway.

"You were right, Nuri. It is wisest to say nothing about myself."

She slipped her revolver into its holster.

Sandy Gillespie, in Arab dress, sitting cross-legged on the divan in Nuri's tent, listened enviously to the bursts of laughter from behind the curtain which separated the women's quarters from the men's. What was Colin doing? He could hear Colin's deeper chuckle through the high-pitched Arab giggles.

Colin soon joined them. "She has a plan, let her tell it," said Nuri. Her face was stained, she wore a long black outdoor dress and had made herself up to look like a mature careworn woman. Her plan was simple, she was going to Sa'ad's tent. He had a new wife to whom he was devoted. His only son, six, was ill with fever. Sa'ad's eldest wife was in despair. She knew if the boy died she would be divorced and she was jealous of the new wife. Colin would tell the mother she could cure the son and thus she might discover where the document was.

Nuri and Sandy saw her safely close to the enemy's tent. Amina, Nuri's pretty daughter, had furnished her with a story complete, the name of the tribe she was supposed to belong to and all the necessary details.

She was posing as Hodeida, a daughter of Bedr: She had heard of the boy's illness and wanted to cure him with a drug given her by a wise woman from Nejef.

Jebora, the mother, led her to the small boy who was tossing on a mattress and Colin squatted among the group of women, among whom was Deliya, the new wife. She had to waste some time to be sure that Nuri and Sandy would not arrive too soon according to the plan they had made. She examined the boy and it was fully an hour before she carefully administered the aspirin she had brought. All the while she watched Deliya who seemed restless as though expecting someone. They must be patient and sit quietly and not touch him, and in half an hour he would be sleeping peacefully.

Ah! Deliya saw something now. She stood outside the tent, in the soft light of the setting sun, her hands clasped against her breast. Colin thought she could hear the sound of hoofs; was this what Deliya was waiting for?

Deliya entered the dark tent and announced to Jebora that horsemen were approaching, no doubt to visit Sa'ad ibn Rashid.

Colin, who had remained in the background, watched Deliya hurry to the curtain and call. There was a short talk; then a large hairy hand came through a torn corner of the curtain and thrust a roll of paper into the waiting hands of Deliya. In a moment it was pushed down the neck of the hideous pink nightgown. The document without a doubt! Colin gasped and then quickly looked away.

Deliya sauntered into the open, the others crowding after her. The sun had already almost touched the horizon and Deliya shaded her eyes to watch the cavalcade approaching.

"That is the Sivasi from Kelekiyah," said Deliya. "I have seen him on a previous visit, and that is Nuri ibn Mahmud"—did her voice harden a little?—"and the young man beside him will be the son of old Sheikh Mahmud's friend, the Englishman who knew the desert so well and whose fathers knew it before him. I have heard tell of this young man: he speaks our language and Sa'ad fears him."

"Look at my little Salim," called Jebora softly. She hung over the dirty little mattress on which he lay her eyes glowing with love. "He sleeps, praise be to Allah!"

Deliya was still gazing into the desert when Stanhope arrived. Sa'ad had welcomed him and led him into the tent and Colin could hear the call for coffee. The women looked through a peep hole and Colin could see Sa'ad's shifty face as Stanhope questioned him. Nuri's men were outside in two groups.

Now and then Deliya would touch her breast to make sure the precious paper was safe. Colin had only to stretch out her hand. Why did she hesitate? Not to give a signal was criminal, to give it, to betray these simple women seemed equally so.

Suddenly through the peep hole she saw Sa'ad turn his head as though he had been called—excusing himself he strode to the curtain and pulling back the drapery where Deliya stood spoke to her: "Give Ibrahim" Colin heard and Sa'ad was back again.

Thereafter Colin watched Deliya, heard steps and saw the faint light inside the tent fall on the face of Ibrahim. Deliya was going to give him the document. Colin must get away and catch him.

She slipped out and as Ibrahim started off he tripped over a tent peg and fell. She leaped and struck him over the head with her revolver, pushed her scarf into his mouth and searched for the document. Quickly she found it and ran round the further side of the tent for Sandy.

"I've got it, come and tie Ibrahim up," she gasped.

They dashed back and tied the traitor's hands behind him. He was too terrified to scream.

Sandy and Colin unrolled the document.

"Yes, that's it . . . By gad, you did that splendidly, Colin."

"Alasdair said you were to come in with Stanhope and the document. I must go back to the tent. I told Stanhope I wanted to see about our horses. Can you get out of those clothes?"

"I can get out of them in a minute, but I must have some water to wash off this black stuff from my face."

"Don't the women know anything's up?"

"Only the one who gave the paper to Ibrahim. Sandy, oughtn't you to get back? Won't Stanhope wonder what you're doing?"

"I said I'd be about ten minutes, but we'll get back now. I'll carry the charming Ibrahim over my shoulder. This really is a tame ending to our adventures—" A shot rang out, breaking the silence, then another and another—screams from the women and sounds of uproar from the tent. Sandy threw Ibrahim over his shoulder.

"Let's run, Colin, or we'll miss the fun."

Hidden Fires -:- By Aileen de Vilbiss

CHAPTER 33

LOUD voices were coming from the officers' cabin. The shrieking, laughing voice of Eve above it all, urging Ruth on.

It was into this scene that Jimmy staggered. He saw dimly through eyes that were blurred the lithe figure of Ruth, weaving the tortorous movements of the hula. Saw her gaily kick a glass out of young Watkin's hands.

Jimmy knew what it was he wanted to do . . . teach Ruth a lesson . . . hurt her as she had him . . . only he could never do that . . . but he must make good his threat . . . and Adams always made good.

Ruth finished the dance amid wild cheers. She slipped off the pine table, and ran forward to the door. Grasping hands clutched at her. Jimmy watched sullenly. His time would come . . .

Ruth's mood had changed. Gone was the exultation of those wild moments. Perhaps it was the thought of Al's hurt eyes that sobered her; she hated to go back to the cabin and face them.

As she turned toward her cabin she found herself staggering. She was tired . . . so tired . . . Perhaps fresh air, before she returned would revive her.

Under the shadow of a tree, she encountered Jimmy, who reeled toward her, muttering, his hair disheveled, collar torn off. She shrieked.

"Jimmy!" He pursued her, and she quickened her steps to evade him; he caught her arm, forced her to walk beside him.

"Jimmy! Let me go!" She saw him staggering dizzily.

"You're coming with me," he muttered vehemently. "I'll teach you to disgrace yourself—and me, too Making mockery of my love."

"Jimmy! You're hurting me!"

"You're going with me in this car," Jimmy dragged her towards one of the officer's cars which was parked beneath a tree.

Jimmy tossed the frightened girl in the seat beside him, started the engine violently and turned the car toward the edge of the crater. He swung dizzily near the edge of the precipice. The car righted itself.

"Oh, Jimmy! Be careful!" Ruth pleaded. "You're crazy. . . . Let me get out of this car at once." She was trying pitifully hard to hang onto a shred of her dignity. She didn't want him to know she was afraid of him . . . dreadfully so. "Wait until Al hears of this." She was trying to bolster up her courage with the thought of Al.

"Al? Ha! ha! That big fool! What does he want of you, anyhow? Why, you'd be better off dead than going the path you are."

She struck him with all the force of her muscular arm.

Jimmy was clutching at her, madly, blindly. Reason deserting him; shouting in his frenzy:

"Better off dead, did I say? Why, I'll kill you myself."

He lurched toward her. His left hand reached for her throat. In Ruth's ears rang the witch's wail: "Death! Death!" She should scream for Al.

She tried to scream. She tried to draw farther into the corner of the seat. She threw up her arm to guard her throat. Why didn't Al come to her aid?

A flash . . . a thunderous report. . . . Jimmy shot Ruth, shot her with the army pistol he'd found in the car.

A sharp, searing pain tore at the warm living flesh of her . . . She thought she shrieked. But fear made of her voice but a breath of sound. She clutched at her side, there where the pain was so severe . . . while Jimmy sat beside her gibbering in fright.

Her hand came away stained—and warm. And then Jimmy pulled the trigger again—and a third time.

INTEREST KEEN IN BIG RADIO EXHIBITION

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

With scores of the finest examples of radio manufacturing craft on exhibition and demonstrating their ability to bring in unbelievable distance and richness of tone, the annual New England Radio Trade Show has turned the fourth floor of the Statler Hotel into one of busiest marts in the field of commerce.

The second day of the show today brought no diminution in interest in the products of America's leading manufacturers of radio apparatus. Dealers from every section of New England were registered, and spent many hours studying the latest developments in the newest of major industries.

All the leading makers of radio receivers and loud speakers were represented in the numerous exhibits presented under the joint auspices of manufacturers and local distributors. Exhibits were particularly notable for the general excellence of tone quality, workmanship and beauty of design. Even the most moderate-priced sets are housed in cabinets of choice woods and artistic lines.

FOR DEALERS ONLY

The present show is being staged for the edification of New England dealers. The general public will have a chance to view the season's output at the regular annual Radio Show at the Boston Garden in October.

The screen-grid tube is a universal feature of practically all sets. The high gain of this tube in radio frequency stages makes its use inevitable if a manufacturer wishes to keep in step with the times. This, combined with the new 245 power tube, and the 227 for detector and audio stages, makes it possible to produce an electric set drawing a uniform filament voltage of 2½ volts, thus simplifying the problem of the power supply.

INDUSTRY BOOMING

According to Eugene R. Farny, president of All-America Mohawk Corp., conditions have never been better in the history of the radio industry.

"Reports from every direction indicate that the billion dollar buying power of the public will be back of the desire for the best in radio," he said.

Exhibitors include:

American Motor Equipment Co., Atlantic Radio and Marine Co., Creco Manufacturing Co., The C. E. Baley Co., Beaudette & Graham Co., Butts Ordway Co., Balkite Radio Corp., Bond Electric Co., J. H. Burke Co., George Collins Co., E. T. Cunningham Tube Co., Colonial Radio Corp., Decatur Hopkins Machine Co., General Electric Supply Co., Harry W. Gedhard (Magnavox), Graybar Electric Co., Howe & Co., Hub Cycle & Auto Supply Co., Linscott Supply Co., Lewis Electric Supply Co., Milhender Electric Supply Co., Motor Supply Co., New England Distributing Co., Northeastern Radio, Inc., Oliver Ditson Co., F. Co., John V. Wilson Co., Wetmore Savage Electric Supply Co.

Three Composers on Pops Program

A program of three great composers will be the order of the Pops in Symphony Hall tonight, as follows:

Prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg"	Wagner
A Siegfried Idyll	Wagner
Ride of the Valkyries	Wagner
Symphony No. 3 in E-flat major, "Eroica," Op. 55	Beethoven
Ballet Suite, "Nutcracker"	Tchaikovsky
Song Without Words	Tchaikovsky
Marche Slave	Tchaikovsky

CALL IT WHAT YOU WILL, it's sunburn just the same, says Dr. Woods Hutchinson in the Boston Sunday Advertiser next Sunday, June 23—but he also tells what to do about it. Whether you get yours via a sunback suit or in more ordinary ways, it is worth while to read what the Doctor says to do about the after effects of sun exposure.

Nubi, Gypsy Gale of Passion
Born of the storm, this half clad human hurricane takes love where she will, from old, from young, from fathers, from son. Cyclone in her caresses, the fury of her passion lays waste the souls of men.

BARRYMORE IS MARRIED HERO IN NEW FILM

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service.)

LOS ANGELES, June 21—Has John Barrymore ever played the role of a married man on the screen? I cannot seem to recall that he has so honored the poor henpecked benedicts. Barrymore is usually the debonair bachelor sweetheart whose lure for women is simply devasting. With few exceptions he has appeared in costume pictures, knowing that he looks unusually well in the picturesque garb of another age. Therefore, when he stars in "The Marriage Circle" and plays a young married man it will be a distinct departure.

Across my befogged mind there flashes a memory of "The Marriage Circle," produced by Warner Brothers in 1924 with Ernest Lubitsch directing and Adolphe Menjou, Monte Blue, Florence Vidor and Marie Prevost in the leading roles. It was one of the first of the subtle, sophisticated farces based on domestic problems and even without dialogue it stood out as a picture among pictures.

Now, "The Marriage Circle" is to be remade with John Barrymore as the married hero and there will be a full quota of sound and talking.

GRETA GARBO can use her Swedish accent without offending the ears of her public when she makes "Anna Christie," for if you remember "Anna Christie" is a Swedish girl of Swedish parentage, and the glamorous Greta won't have to step out of character. She can just be herself.

Clarence Brown is now getting ready to direct Miss Garbo in "Anna Christie," but before that picture is made there is a possibility that she will star in "A Woman Accused," to be directed by Jacques Fedor. By the bye, since the marriage of Jack Gilbert, Greta is more elusive and more in her shell than ever. She seems afraid to trust anyone. Even her close friendship with Edmund Lowe and Lilyan Tashman is now a thing of the past.

THE separation of Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill is final. No longer will these two be teamed and emote in the same comedy, drama, or what have you. The team has been split with Jack Mulhall being co-featured with Lois Wilson in "Dark Swan." Jack is on a vacation in Honolulu and the picture will not be started until he returns.

Meanwhile, Lois is getting a little rest from her combined screen and stage activities. "Dark Swan," in case you haven't read the book, is by Ernest Pascal, and is certainly not the type of thing you'd expect Jack Mulhall to play.

SOMETIMES a marital separation inspires these women to bigger and greater achievements. Mrs. Lewis Stone, who as Florence Oakley was very well known on the stage, retired some years ago from professional activity when she married Stone. She devoted her time to her husband's career. Then came a rift in the Stone lute and she decided to return to her first love, the stage.

As Julie, in the Los Angeles edition of "The Royal Family," she received most favorable notices. Since that time she has been busy on the screen, and now she is to play opposite Will Rogers in "They Had to See Paris."

"DANCING RHYTHM" sounds like a swell title for a musical comedy. Pathe is about to burst into dialogue and lyrics on the screen with "Dancing Rhythm," a musical play especially written by Earl Baldwin, with the book by Joseph Franklin Poland. Leo McCarey, who for years was one of Hal Roach's principal directors, will megaphone.

"Joe College," conceded to be Pathe's best picture of the year, was directed by McCarey, hence the new job. By the bye, Barney Glazer who resigned from Pathe, has signed to make four pictures for United Artists when he returns from abroad. In other words, Barney should worry about giving up one job, for there are always two or three in the offing.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Lenore Ulric in scarlet chiffon dancing with Sidney Blackmer at the Cocoanut Grove. Eddie Rickenbacker, famous ace and hero, dancing with Edna Murphy by permission of Mervyn Le Roy. Half of Hollywood's screen writers lunching at the Brown Derby. Dorothy Sebastian in a green summer frock dancing with Clarence Brown at the Ambassador Hotel.

Pauline Stark among those present at the Ambassador with her husband, Jack White. Also Gertrude Olmstead and Robert Leonard. Dorothy Herzog's young looking mother, guest of honor at two luncheons at the Montmartre. Jack Pickford and Mickey Neilan at the Roosevelt, dancing with two pretty girls. Leo Schlessinger rejoicing that there are silent pictures still being made so he can furnish titles for them. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

40 Bottles—One Suicide and One Murder

Here's a Text for a Sermon

Copyright, 1929, New York Evening Journal, Inc. Registered U. S. Patent Office.

HER DRESSING TABLE. SHE WAS MURDERED.

It isn't necessary to say much about THIS picture, taken in the New York apartment of the unhappy woman, Margaret Lawrence, after she had been murdered by the actor, Louis Bennison, who killed himself.

The bottles that you see here, containing bootleg liquor, were only a few of the bottles that detectives found. Among others were FORTY EMPTY GIN BOTTLES.

The murder of the woman, the suicide of the man who killed her, were both ALCOHOLIC.

The murderer had exhausted his money. Detectives believe that the woman whom he murdered refused to give him hers; perhaps, poor creature, she had none.

Both, it is said, drank hard; the man had been on a prolonged spree. Murder and suicide followed.

Detectives once had a motto, the French detectives saying "Cherchez la femme," "Seek the woman."

That is changed in modern cases of murder and suicide to "SEEK THE EMPTY BOTTLE."

When the history of "absolute prohibition," as we humorously call it, is written for the United States, this little picture might be one of the illustrations.

To it might be added photographs that newspapers have published of the murdered woman, at different stages in her career, showing ravages wrought by alcohol in a once beautiful face.

It is not quite fair to say that the 40 empty bottles and the alcohol-crazed murderer were ALONE responsible.

Back of the crime stands the professional bootlegger that sells poisonous whiskey for profit.

And back of that bootlegger stands EMINENT AMERICAN "RESPECTABILITY," defying the law because "Respectability" chooses to drink, proud of its so-called "pre-war" alcoholic poisons, not concealing even from children the fact that their parents defy and VIOLATE LAWS that do not suit them.

It is a rotten situation that this picture illustrates, one of which this nation should be ashamed.

The first duty of the United States is to find a way to restore temperance to this country and abolish the so-called "prohibition" that makes of whiskey the ONLY drink of those that DO drink; the prohibition that is responsible for degradation, crime and murder on a scale never before known in any civilized country.

Help E. Boston, Mr. Mayor

These are days when the health of children in the congested city districts is dependent to great extent upon their opportunities of absorbing those disease preventives which Nature has provided in the open air, the sunlight and the salt water.

Nobody will deny that East Boston is a congested district, nor can anybody deny with sincerity that the city has failed to make adequate playground and bathing beach provisions for East Boston's thousands of children.

The East Boston Betterment Association makes a very reasonable demand upon Mayor Nichols for better equipped playgrounds and beaches, pointing out that Wood Island Park fills every requirement save that of accessibility. It is far removed from many sections of East Boston where children must seek recreation in traffic-filled streets and along a waterfront beset with countless dangers for immature caution.

We have rather prided ourselves as a city, in our foresight where the youngsters are concerned, but it must be admitted that we have neglected East Boston, not consciously, perhaps, but no less positively. East Boston has a right to protest and the administration, if it be wise, will heed that protest.

Graduation of the Blind

The most poignant paragraph of all those thousands of poignant paragraphs dealing with college and school commencements is tucked away in an obscure corner of the morning newspaper under a small-type heading which attracts little attention.

We thrill to Baccalaureate sermons, to odes and orations, and our pulses quicken at the vision of youth, confident, sincere, striding forth to match wits with the world. And then we stumble across that paragraph, hidden away, and all the vivid freshness that is the graduate outlook on life shrivels as a leaf wilts, touched by flame. If you missed it, here it is:

> The graduation exercises of the Perkins Institute for the Blind in Watertown were held yesterday, with 14 receiving diplomas for various types of manual training. There were songs by the institution chorus and essays by 10 of the graduating class.

Perhaps they see clearest into the future who do not see at all!

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

TO BE a perfect lover, a man should have the eloquence of a Romeo, the imagination of a Jules Verne, and the conscience of a Muncheusen.

A cynic is a paying teller who always looks first at the wrong end of a woman's check for the signature of endorsement.

THE SILK-PLUSH LOVERS

Oh, love was sweet and very fair,
When girls wore roses in their hair;
When lovers talked a lot of gush—
And maids had not forgot to blush.

When ardent wooing was the fashion,
And no one ever spoke of "passhun";
When Don Juans sought to be disarming,
And tried to imitate Prince Charming.

When scented notes were written neatly,
And tucked in nosegays, most discreetly;
And flirts broke hearts with feathered fans—
And love was made on plush divans.

When kissing went by special favors,
And came not in assorted flavors;
When women won by charm or wit—
And men had never heard of "IT."

When sweet discretion marked a lover,
And everything was under cover;
When collars reached up to the chin—
And kissing was a pleasant "sin."

Yes, love was very sweet and fair,
When girls wore roses in their hair;
And manners were like melted honey—
And all roads led to matrimony!

But, gone, alas, the silk-plush lover!
His sun has set—his day is over.
Yet, in that halcyon Long Ago,
Life must have been goshawful slow!

Words of Wisdom

In Solitude
What happiness? Who can enjoy alone,
Or all enjoying, what contentment find?
—Milton.

All creeds and opinions are nothing but the mere result of chance and temperament.—Shorthouse.

I love children. They do not prattle of yesterday; their interests are all of today and the tomorrows—I love children. —Mansfield

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I HAVE a new slogan over my desk. It says—

"WELL, WHAT OF IT?"

Maybe you don't need a slogan like that but I need it—BAD. I have a great little trick of taking myself too seriously. If I have a toothache or heartache it's the worst toothache or heartache that has ever been recorded in human history. If I'm mad, it's the worst mad.

You wouldn't guess it to meet me. I'm a big, buxom, beaming blonde with a lot of glad hand technique—but nevertheless, that's the way I am. Underneath the wide open spaces of my smile there's plenty of peeve. And I always consider anything that happens to me as front page news.

But of course it isn't!

I've had lots of life but none of it's novel. It all has happened to someone else before. I didn't invent tears or tummy aches—I did not copyright the blues. Suppose they do happen to me—to you that count—it's how you take them." I didn't originate that sentiment—but I discover anew each day how true it is.

WHAT OF IT?

That's life.

Almost anything can happen to you and probably will. And it may rile you a lot—but it isn't greatly important either to you or the rest of the world.

THE ONLY THINGS THAT ARE IMPORTANT—THE ONLY THINGS THAT ARE LASTING—ARE THE REACTIONS OF YOUR OWN CHARACTER UNDER STRAIN.

Lincoln called them "the proud and invincible motions of character." They alone matter.

Thousands of people have died of tuberculosis. But Robert Louis Stevenson lived gaily and generously and gallantly in spite of it. His crumbling lungs hurt him dreadfully but he saw plainly that lungs, well or ill, do not count greatly in the scheme of things. He realized that the greatest thing a man may achieve in this short adventure is not breath, but Wisdom—and Love. So he shrugged away his pain and weakness and he gave all he had to achieve that imperishable treasure. In the face of death he cried—"WELL, WHAT OF IT!"

And now most of us do not even know that the great R. L. S. had tuberculosis. We only know he left us Beauty and Truth.

"WELL, WHAT OF IT!" That's more than a flippant retort. It is, I think, the bravest challenge a man may make to Fate.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

OUR travel bureau is now open to the charged public absolutely free of information.

No matter where you want to go, ask our travel editor. It is better to have two guessing than one.

The Rockies are splendid for the peculiar tourists who imagine that lumpy horizons are scenery.

If you like your real estate without taxes, we would suggest the Rocky mountains.

The Siberian-Manchurian border is magnificent during the summer solstices. School teachers desiring to be held for ransom please notify our travel editor.

We recommend the fiords of Norway. These fjords are the old model T.

Norwegian dealers claim they cannot catch up to the orders for the 1929 fiords.

The all-scenic [illegible] through the gauntlet of revenue agents via the Canadian border and the pearly gates is now open to the public and its friends.

The Riffs are starting to riffle again on the edge of the Sahara. We can furnish you uniforms for either side.

Don't forget Old Faithful in Yellowstone Park. This geyster spouts when you throw a cake of soap into it. The temperature of the water is 16 janitors above the boiling point. Tourists are invited to find the soap.

The orange-drink stands of Broadway are lovely in blossom time.

Shipwreck Kelly is willing to sub-lease a comfortable bungalow on top of a flagpole. Kelly says he sat on a steeple two weeks and was arrested for parking.

These are beautiful places to spend the summer. You will have to call in person on our travel editor. In 50 years he has refused to move off his front porch.

The Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

PALE crescent, swinging in the turquoise West
Like some frail, silver petal of a flower
Adrift against infinity's still breast,
Your calm breathes out its fragrance on the hour.
Now passions fade as fades the afterglow,
Where in the sky its glories faint away;
Aloof, remote, we watch their grav ghosts go.
Your tranquil presence heals the hurts of day.
And after all the fever and the fret,
The lust of living and the greed of gain,
This is enough to banish all regret—
This gleam of your white arc, low-swung again.
This is enough to know that there can be
Such beauty blooming through eter[illegible]

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 21—Thoughts while strolling: Gushing middle-aged women who "chaperone" young artists. And grown-up ladies who carry Teddy bears. Nothing so cheerless as a hotel about to come down. The negro with rattle-skin hat band selling rubber snakes around the Plaza fountain.

Sinclair Lewis, a Sauk Center, Minn., boy, who made good in the city. The adagio dancer who is a Sunday school teacher. Glenn Anders looks like a college boy. School teacher trippers. Benny Leonard's slick hair. Beauty parlor cowboys. An insolent taxi driver hurls the dime tip at his fare. Vash Young window shopping.

Long haired dreamers who carry limp leather sketch books. Elinor Glynn's wide-brimmed hat. Ladies brilliant as electric lights are brilliant. Gigolo types roaming hotel lobbies with the gait of a sure-footed cat. The outside gloom of the Pennsylvania station at night. The talkies grow dismal.

Molly Picon, the Yiddish comedienne. Praised by Griffith, if that means anything. The boys with dinky mustaches and derbies who ride in roadsters. Palm smothered table d'hotes. Who remembers when hand-painted coal vases were what ho! The drug store army of malted milk lunchers. H. H. Van Loan is Mayor Walker's double. So is Neal O'Hara.

Mrs. Brock Pemberton, who has costumed so many stage hits. Sedate candy stores refusing to go chain store. Lily cool green frocks and wide flopping hats. Stock favorites from the outland seeing the summer shows. The flapper first nighter who sports a monocle. Whatever became of Jesse Reed?

And now the hired book endorsers are three-sheeted on billboards. All night dental parlors featuring half-price after 3 a. m. Ted Healy, a new favorite of the revues. A pajama shop. New York's threadbare words, "gorgeous" and "absolutely." Mme. Alda of the opera. The whitest haired dramatic critic in town, E. W. Osborn.

Ladies berets that may be carried in vanity cases. A new iced drink —watermelon juice. $1.59 shirts again. Pretty hard to resist stopping to watch them lay an asphalt sidewalk. Autograph collectors waiting at stage doors. The Madison ave. shop where President Hoover buys his cigars. Very wah-wah!

A true story. She was living high up in a boarding house hall room awaiting an engagement in a chorus. One midnight her agent phoned her to meet him at a certain yachting dock. He had provided her as a guest for a rich man on a week-end yachting trip along with several other merry magdalens. The yacht owner fell in love at first sight and she fell in love with him. When she returned she deposited $17,000 in a bank for her trousseau. Three weeks later he died. Six weeks later she was broke again and hunting a job. Broadway! Dear old Broadway!

The speed of New York building wreckers offers a bit of metropolitan magic. In the destruction of a large building a day overtime entails a gigantic loss. Wreckers estimate the time required and if it takes more time they must pay a forfeit. If they beat their own estimate they receive a bonus. The old Broadway theater recently was razed in 15 days. The Vanderbilt mansion wreckers bargained to complete the job in 20 days and took 31—thereby taking a big loss. The most famous of the wreckers was Jacob Volk, son of an East Side butcher. Volk passed on recently, worth millions. His crews demolished some of the biggest structures. He could almost tell at a glance how long it would take to bring a building down. His great ambition was to tackle the Woolworth tower, supposed to have the greatest of all architectural permanance. He believed it could be done in a year.

An overworked parlor trick is to enter the room with a hat and inquire of anyone what they would like to see taken out of it. "A rabbit," will be the reply and out comes a toy rabbit. Psychological stuff. In actual tests 95 out of 100 will say a rabbit.

Mayor Walker's usual companion to the theater is the publisher, Paul Block. So far they have always managed to be in their seats before the final curtain. And at most shows that's time enough for anybody.

Courtney Ryley Cooper was seen pacing up and down nervously in front of a Madison ave. tailor shop where "a set of threads" costs $210—the highest price for a tailored suit in town. "I'm trying to sell myself the idea," he explained to a friend.

Endless Energy

The Boston American will continue to publish articles by Garrett P. Serviss. The late scientist had prepared a number of these in advance, and they will appear from time to time.

"Why is it that energy can only be transformed but never lost, destroyed or created by man? Are all the sources of energy traced back to the sun?—M. D., Chicago."

IT was a saying of ancient philosophers that truth lies at the bottom of a well; but they had no idea how deep was that well. And now science is finding out that the well is floored with false bottoms, each of which in turn conceals a still deeper deposit of mud, with only bubbles issuing to show that truth may be below somewhere.

The bubbles are used to inflate theories which rise out of the mouth of the well like balloons and one after another go floating off to burst and disappear in infinite space.

Such, up-to-date, is the Sisyphus-occupation of those who go seeking for absolute truth—the bottom facts of existence. There has never been any dictum not ultimately contradicted, and this is true of the doctrine of the "conservation of energy." Until man got his intellectual fingers inside the atom, it looked as though that doctrine were a bit of absolute truth; but now doubts are awakened. The interior of the atom begins to look to some spectulators like a sanctuary wherein the "laws" that prevail outside have no executive force.

But we may keep away from the miasmic well wherein the digging after truth goes on, and wait to see if it shall be eventually cleared and purified. And meanwhile we can continue to accept the doctrine of the conservation of energy and admire its many beautiful points.

But, then we must be content, as is the case with all the "old knowledge," with the admission that we cannot know WHY things are as they are; but we may know how they are related and the way they act upon and among one another.

We say that energy cannot be lost simply because when it seems to be gone we are able to trace it and find it again, if only we look long and carefully enough. And it reappers in so many wonderfully different forms that we can hardly blame ourselves for feeling a strong faith that it is so to speak immortal and indestructable.

It is Proteus himself. There is no end to its changeability, but its essential nature is never lost. It is always energy in some form; i. e. it is always doing or ready to do work of some kind.

In truth, we are not bound to account for the existence of energy any more than we are bound to account for the existence of matter, or for our own existence. The simple fact is that we can't. We exist, we are here.

So energy exists, here and everywhere, and we can no more make energy, as our experience proves, than we can make life or matter out of nothing. The world and the universe are made up of at least these two realities — matter and energy. And apparently one cannot exist without the other, for they are interchangeable. Matter has been called "frozen energy," and energy then might be called fluid matter.

Electricity is a form of energy, light is a form of energy, heat is a form of energy, motion is a form of expression of energy. The atom seems to be a storehouse of inconceivable energy. Swedenborg thought that energy was the original force of the creator poured through creation.

That is too "mystical" for some who do not consider "space-time" to be at all mystical. Great is the power of the point of view.

Of course all the sources of energy are not to be traced to the sun. The sun supplies nearly all the energy we know of in the solar system; but the sun is a small star among billions of others, and the solar system is but a speck lighted by this small particular star of ours.
